19 Letters
The corner of the mag written by you. Scary stuff.

25 Bar Room Jokes
Punchline teaser: "...anal is out of the question."

Reporter 28
Li'l Lee shoots stuff! A knife slices a flying bullet in half! Insects in a dance of death! More inside!

36 Bloke Test
Maybe a tad unfairly, both Adam and Joe take on Tim Burgess. But who wears the man crown(s)?

47 Student Of The Year
Bath Spa University pen-chewer Jodi Colquitt makes her play for the Uni Of The Year award.

Sex Confidential 61

61 Ask The Honey
Oh the joys of democracy! You select a honey. She strips for a cover, then writes about sex for a living.

62 Ladies' Confessions
The evil women do, after nine Bacardi Breezers.

65 FHM Erotique
Our artistic eye focuses on Bob Carlos Clarke and his classy pornography (or art, if you prefer).

69 Girls On The Sofa
Lap dancers of the north-west spill the sexy beans.

Features 74

74 Hugh Jackman
Van Helsing's leading bloke on darts in Norwich pubs and his Pa having bum sex with kangaroos*.

76 Gianne Albertoni
She's the new Giselle! Enjoy the peachiest arse we've seen for yonks on page 76. It's a winner!

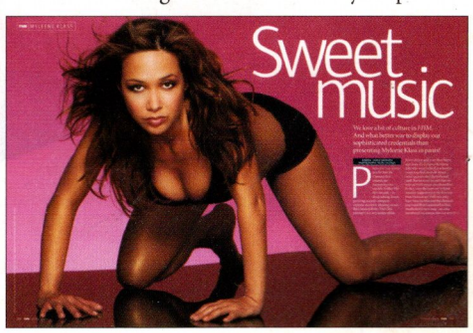
*Clearly this never happened. Please don't sue us Mr Jackman Sr, eh?

Sex Survey
COVER STORY 110 With over 25,000 voters, it's the UK's biggest-ever sex survey. And a fifth of the respondants were female. Cool...
Sex UK!
Who's doing what to who?
Self-abuse

87 SPECIAL REPORT Global Warming!
COVER STORY A wake-up call for George Bush, Tony Blair, and you, FHM-reading buddy! It turns out the world's screwed. And it's your fault.

94 Satan's Little Helpers
Seven true stories of the evil that children get up to, and we're not talking poo through letter boxes.

96 Myleene Klass
The violin fiddlin', piano plinkin' babe returns to her favourite magazine for more saucy snaps.



102 The Gambler
Our man heads to the Antipodes to spunk more of his wages up the wall. And a frog pisses on him.

108 Derren Brown
The mind man's powers (and sinister beard) frankly scare the bejeesus out of poor Li'l Lee.

Things we did this month...

■ Watched a waiter spill the drinks as he served the gorgeous Abi Titmuss, who was wearing a baby doll-style nylon top held in place purely by the power of static electricity.

■ Got rejected by an online perv when one female FHM staffer attempted to sell her worn thong on the net for $20. Apparently, "her scent was too light".

■ Had a birthday curry with mum as the drunken man opposite used the C word well over 100 times. More mango chutney, mother?

■ Stared in awe at the army of teen Goths politely queuing across the road from our office, waiting for Goth band, HiM, in HMV. One word kids: "soap".

■ Politely nodded over the dinner table at Eddie Jordan during a Chelsea vs Arsenal game, courtesy of Ford, while an ear infection ensured we couldn't hear a single word he said. He seemed like a really nice chap though.

■ Spent three days cleaning car. Reconnected nitrous oxide. Raced a Ferrari. Lost.

■ Forced into an Essex lady shop by girlfriend to see Big Brother's Jade talking loudly at random people. Not impressed.

■ Startled evening commuters by projectile vomiting after a long day at the races with FHM.

■ Attacked by a giant mutant crustacean on the South Coast of Australia.

■ Spent an afternoon in a pub with the delightful Myleene. It's still her round!

■ Brilliant FHM day out at Sandown Park. This man is not right in the head.

■ Met up with a random woman on the strength of a couple of bizarre, out-of-the-blue text messages. Nine pints later...

■ Questioned England winger Ben Cohen's tackling techniques. He decided on an impromptu workshop. Last thing remembered is face hitting floor.

■ Hopped onto bed with Carmen – the fourth sexiest woman in the world.

■ Drank a sambuca company dry on a boozy day out in Bristol with honey Kayleigh. Thanks, Opal Nera!

■ Made to look like a brown-nosing fool by the Sunday Times, after Emap romped home 91st in their top 100 companies in Britain. Still being mocked.

■ Went to Iceland courtesy of Shockwaves. Raced big trucks across glaciers, then feasted on rotting fish. Icelanders: great drivers. Crap cooks.

Enjoy the issue!

David Davies

■ Swanned around London in a limo, learning online gambling with this ginger beast.

FHM LETTER OF THE MONTH!

Pop monkey humiliated

Out on the town in Risa in Birmingham, who should turn up but the legendary Mark Owen, formerly of Take That. Seizing up the situation, my mate dropped his slacks to reveal his "male thong", before being bundled out by the bouncers – but I think you'll agree it was worth it.

JOHN, CARDIFF

The ex-boy band buffoon was wearing an Arthur Dailey hat. Indoors. Let's face it, he deserved everything he got.

FHM got me laid 1

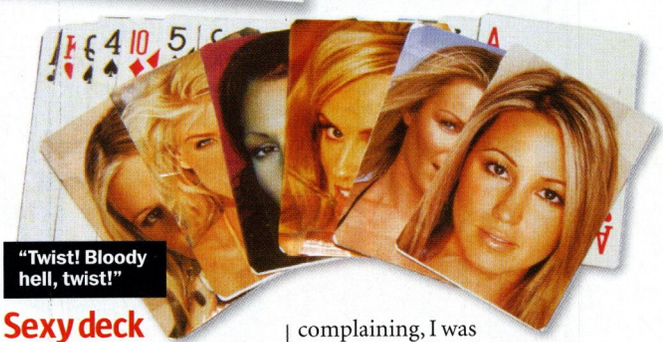
In May, you ran a 50 Ways To Dump Your Girlfriend feature – and I was thinking about doing just that. But when I turned to the section I found the pictures of the women were so sexy, my mind turned straight to the bedroom. The next thing I know I'm upstairs giving the missus the best three-and-a-half minutes of her life, instead of dumping her. Thanks! I think.

RM, TRURO

FHM got me laid 2

Reading Ladies' Confessions last month, I noticed that the two horniest, kinkiest stories were from girls named Lucy. At a club a couple of weeks later, I met this sexy blonde. When I told her my "research" showed that girls named Lucy were generally a bit kinky, she informed me that she didn't wear knickers, and would I like to walk her home? Result! We did it there and then on the swings, and my sex life has since become daring, adventurous and downright filthy – she's even hinting at a threesome! Thanks, FHM!

KEVIN BIRKETT, VIA E-MAIL



Sexy deck

Thanks for the 100 Sexiest Women. As my cell walls are already covered with pictures of these glorious ladies, I thought I'd repay the favour by making a one-off pack of cards for the office, using pictures from the supplement. Happy playing!

M COSSINGTON, HMP NORWICH

Sadly, the backs are meant to be identical so you can't tell which is which. Are you in chokey for cheating at cards, perhaps?

Never satisfied

I've just noticed that on the cover of the May's FHM, Carmen Electra's mammoth mammaries were described as "nature as God intended". While certainly not complaining, I was wondering – did God really intend there to be two great big bags of silicone added to those funbags?

PETER, BELFAST

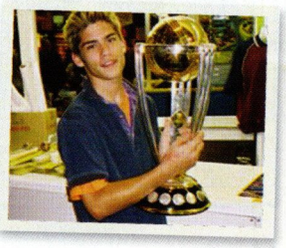
He doth work in mysterious ways, my son.

Howzat?

Look! At a show on holiday in Queensland, I got my hands on the Cricket World Cup.

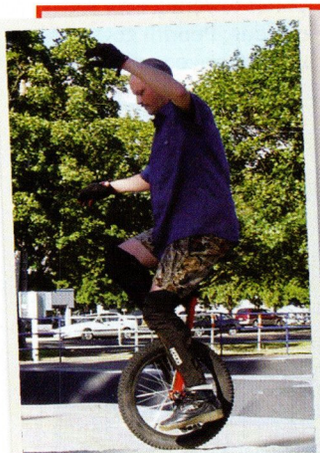
RICHY RICHMOND, TAUNTON

Probably the only Englishman who ever will... ▷



Handbag corner!

'There's nothing remotely cool about a unicycle. Clowns ride them,' we wrote last month. Oops...



Give me a break – do I look a clown here?

JAGUR THOMAS

Frankly, yes.

FHM – you should eat a rat. You guys are dead wrong! Me and my mates do trials unicycling and the chicks dig us...

All I ask is you give us a chance to prove what can be done on unicycles, and see whether other people think it's cool, not some person giving a one-sided...

I'm a keen unicyclist, trying to promote the sport to the public. As the unicycle is seen as different it's hard for people to take it seriously. It becomes increasingly frustrating that such a widely-read magazine should portray inaccurate views of unicycling. Unicycling is THE new extreme sport...

Boa conductor

I recently got an electrician in when our power failed. After a bit, the sparky asked us, "Has anyone lost a snake?" Sat in our fuse box was a slightly electrocuted neighbour's snake, who'd foolishly settled in the warmth of our electrics…

IAIN MORTON, BIRMINGHAM

Taste like chicken?

Submariner facts

What opened your military hardware feature last month? One of the Royal Navy's V-boats. I'm serving on a similar sub myself and nearly shat myself laughing. The "library"? A bookshelf. The "cinema" is a crappy TV, the "games area" three decks of cards. As for "studying for a degree", if a shitload of porn is classed as further education then yes, we're all studying very hard. I can only assume you got your information from the Navy – the same Navy that told me I'd be going to exotic places, while forgetting to mention I'd be underwater seeing sod all for three months at a time.

LMA HUGHES, HMS/M VIGILANT

Who'd have foreseen it! If only there'd been some clue in the Submarine Transfer Request you must have completed…

After constant nagging, I bought my wife a breadmaker. Eyeing the instructions, she turned to me in disappointment and said, "I didn't realise it needed ingredients as well." Silly me – I'd only gone and bought the non-magic version.

K TAYLER, BRISTOL

Surprised to read that raindrops only fall at 7mph, I wanted to know what my girlfriend would guess. "They come down from quite high…" she mused, "so maybe a few thousand miles per second?"

PAUL THOMAS, WIMBLEDON

Supermarket shopping with my beautiful girlfriend, I asked her to grab a pack of medium fresh eggs. With no response I turned to see her staring puzzled at the shelves. "Can't we just get some fully fresh ones?" she asked.

"B", PRESTON

One night the electricity went off. "It's definitely a power cut," I told the missus, looking out at the street in blackness. "It can't be," she informed me. "All the passing cars still have their lights on."

LIAM DUNNE, BIRMINGHAM

A news report said how they were going to stop servicing the Hubble Space Telescope after 14 years in orbit. "Does that mean the astronauts on board can finally come home?" asked the girlfriend. She's studying to be a doctor.

RAJ, HOUNSLOW

Discussing fake IDs, a mate said you could get a good one via the black market. "What day's that on?" asked my girlfriend.

Body identified

After spending many a happy hour gazing at the 100 Sexiest Women In The World, my wife noticed that, though you can't see her face, the girl on the cover looks remarkably like Charlotte Marshall, top ten finalist High Street Honey. She said she "recognised her mouth". Obviously that wasn't the bit I was looking at! Can you confirm?

STEVE, EXETER

That toned, decapitated body generated almost as much mail as those bloody unicyclists – but only Mrs Steve got it right. You've married a woman with a keen eye, sir.

What's wrong with FHM?

Where we punish our lazy subs by making them give you ...

Wrong loves all its beautifully pedantic correspondents like children, but sometimes even our own plucky offspring are naughty and require a good thrashing to keep them in line. So this month we're taking time out to fully explain the rules of What's Wrong With FHM? [1] Only spots that are especially clever and/or funny get the nod and are subsequently printed in the magazine. [2] Wrong's decision is final and there is no appeal process. [3] Only Wrongs printed in the magazine under their own header – like, for instance, "Clocks stopped" here to the right, not those mentioned in passing in the intro copy – win the £20 Wrong prize. [4] The process of writing in or sending an e-mail does not qualify for any prize of any kind whatsoever. So stop bloody asking, okay? Clocks stopped

In April's FHM Arms it has a tiny section that says all the clocks in Pulp Fiction are set at 4.20. But this is wrong, as when Vincent and Jules go and visit Jimmy at his house it is clear the clock is showing closer to 8.20.

STEWART, GLASGOW

Difficult to swallow

In your March 2004 issue on page 99, you state all spiders are poisonous. The correct term is that all spiders are venomous. The difference between poison and venom? Poison is what you digest (eat, drink etc...), venom (as in snake and spider bites) is what digests you, as it is a modified enzyme to help kill prey and assist digestion.

While reading Reporter in the May issue I came across the RoboSapien and saw the binary code beside it which apparently meant "cool". But "cool" in binary is actually 0100001101101 1110110111101101100.

IDIOT OF THE MONTH

In the March issue I was reading a report called Cheat The Reaper. Now as I was looking through the report I noticed that Richard Branson seems to die twice. Once in a plane crash and the other in a train crash.

A man walks into his local chemist: "Excuse me," he says to the assistant, "what are the best condoms you have?"
"What colour?" asks the assistant.
"Oh it really doesn't matter," says the customer.
"In that case," advises the assistant, "we've a great offer on 12 ultra-safe condoms, all different colours, for just £1."
Happy to be saving some cash, the customer pays up and leaves. Six months later, the very same man strolls back into the chemist.
"Do you sell maternity bras?" he asks.
The assistant walks over: "What bust?"
"Can't be sure," replies the man, "we think the red one."

A teacher addresses her class: "Children, do any of you know what you would like out of life?"
A girl at the back raises her hand: "Four animals, miss."
"Really," replies the teacher, intrigued, "and what four animals might they be?"
"Simple," says the girl, "a mink on my back, a jaguar in the garage, a tiger in the bed and a jackass to pay for it all."

FHM JOKE OF THE MONTH

FOUR TEENS ARE TRAGICALLY KILLED WHEN their light aircraft crashes in dreadful weather. Investigators quickly arrive on the scene and find only a chimpanzee alive by the plane. Dazed, the chimp starts making signs and gestures. "I think he's trying to tell us something," says the chief investigator, crouching down.
"Do you understand me?" he asks the chimp.
The primate nods.
"Can you show me what these people were doing before the aircraft crashed?"
Slowly, the chimp raises a hand to his mouth and makes drinking gestures.
"Drinking booze," says the chief, "what else?"
The chimp pretends to smoke.
"Smoking drugs, too, eh?"
The chimp nods.
"Anything else?"
The chimp grabs the man's leg and thrusts away.
"They were having sex?!"
The chimp nods his head.
"No wonder they crashed," sighs the investigator, "but I'm confused – what did these idiots want with you?"
The chimp grins, hops back into the wreckage and sits proudly on the front seat.
"He finally gone cold on you, chief?" asks an onlooking officer.
"No," says the chief, "...he was the pilot."

Troubling calls

Sporting two horribly blistered ears, a blonde visits her doctor: "I was ironing a skirt and the phone rang," she explains, "but instead of picking up the phone, I accidentally grabbed the iron and pressed it to my ear."
"Good grief," says the doc, astounded at such carelessness, "and what happened to your other ear?"
"Well," explains the woman, "the son of a bitch only went and called back!"

Generous in death

A man's wife goes missing. Sick with worry, he phones the police. After three long days, an officer knocks on his door, cap in hand and with a solemn look on his face: "I'm afraid I have some bad news, sir," he explains, "we've just found your wife under the pier – she's been dead for two days."
The man breaks down into floods of tears.
"There, there," says the officer, "there is some good news."
"Really?" sobs the man.
"It's not much," explains the officer, "but when we pulled your wife up, she was covered in sea creatures – crayfish, crabs, lobsters, you name it. We took them off and figured you might want them... maybe for the funeral?"
"She was always giving," weeps the distraught man, "even in death it seems. Is that all?"
"It is, sir," says the officer, "except that me and the lads knock off around five – if you fancy it, pop down to the pier."
"What for?" asks the man.
"Dinner," says the cop, "we're going to pull the old girl up again and see what she's caught this time."

Sister bliss

No Daniel for us, thanks. Only sis Natasha Bedingfield please – much nicer all round!

WHEN FHM discovered there was another Bedingfield peddling their wares in the music industry, we sighed, groaned, and then opened the e-mail attachment. By god, it's a girl! And she's hot. Granted, she's still related to the donut that is Daniel, but we couldn't let this stand against her, so we listened to her first single, called appropriately enough, Single, and her velvety tones swung it. "Get her in the mag!" balled the boss. So here, just for you, is the far more desirable Bedingfield they call Natasha.

FHM arrives at the shoot and peers through giant polystyrene boards where, sprawled across a mirrored table, is Natasha in tiny denim hot pants. Only moments later, we discover Natasha's a little bit barking. "If I were an instrument I'd be a saxophone!" Hang on, we didn't even ask what type of instrument she'd want to be. But seeing as she's talking about the sax, we ask if she's learnt the fabulous skill of circular breathing? "Yes, but I've not mastered it yet. You've got to breathe in at the same time as your cheeks are full and then blow out..." Then FHM informs her how good it is for oral sex. "So I should learn? You're giving me sex tips, that's cool. I'll keep coming back..."

And then it's on, albeit briefly, to her slightly unbalanced older brother. Can she belt out a note higher than him? "I don't know! We've never had a singing competition. I can beat him at boxing though." Eh? "We have these boxing gloves, and if you're counting punches, I can take him." Good girl. But ▷ has she ever caused him any real damage? "When we were kids, he put ant poison in my food. We were up a tree so I pushed him out, and he broke his arm." Superb! She sings, she's hot, she fights and she's even broken ol' pudding boy's arm! Has she ever "entertained" any of his mates though? "It's funny, because we just went back to New Zealand and he was farming out his sisters to his mates! It was like, 'If anything happens with you and my sister, you've got my okay,' without even telling us!"

Sisters? So there's another female Bedingfield waiting in the wings? "Yeah, my younger sister, Nikola. She's gorgeous and she's got an amazing voice. Me, Nikola and Daniel all live together. We stay up until 2am every night just chatting when he's there." And when he's not? "We take advantage of the garden and go out in our bikinis at night in the freezing cold just for fun."

'I go swimming and lose my knickers'

Sexy sisters? Cavorting in the garden! Perfect. And how does she feel about going out commando? "I have," she laughs, "but just for fun. I didn't tell anyone. And coming from New Zealand, you go swimming and sometimes you lose your knickers." And has she ever, er, had sex in a bed in a field? "That's so good," she laughs, politely ignoring the worst gag in history, "No, I haven't. Maybe that's where the name's from."

And finally, in honour of her inaugural FHM appearance, has she a message for the FHM readers? "Oh yes," she smiles, "Tell them I'm single and available. Oh, and send Polaroids..." DE

Natasha's single, called Single is out on May 3.

Bug fight!

When you were a kid, you'd spend hours and hours getting to know your garden's creepy crawlies. But you weren't armed with a camera like this...

MAKING IT TO THE TOP OF most professions takes time, money and, of course, a penis. But not snapping bugs with a scanning electron microscope. No sir. To be the best at that, you just have to bury pets. "To collect bugs, I buried a dog in a local park," says Volker Steger, the photographer of Buzz: The Intimate Bond Between Humans And Insects – a fabulous new ManBook infested with mind-boggling bug images just as you see here. "When I dug it up, there was a smell, but lots of beetles."

And before A N Idiot and Co write to complain, the dog was dead. We think. Besides, Steger's ends justify his means. To create these images, he first kills his prey using ether-dipped swabs or liquid hydrogen to stun the beasts. Next, he coats them in a mixture of silver and platinum before scanning them with an electron beam. The result is a monochrome image, which Steger then colours digitally.

"Watching flies fight is my favourite – it's like a World War II dogfight," Steger says. "And if you want to get two ants from the same family to fight, just touch one of them. Your smell causes the other ant to not recognise his friend. Then it attacks."

Not all insects are so much fun. "Maggots are the most disgusting bugs," Steger assures us, "I got my girlfriend to hold a bunch of them for one shot. She didn't like me very much." SB

Go forth and pester your nearest book-seller for Buzz: The Intimate Bond Between Humans And Insects ($25). If they fail you, swat the fools!

	Tim Burgess	Adam & Joe
EVER PUNCHED SOMEONE SPARK OUT?	Yeah, an insane individual who's a singer in a fairly unknown American band. He tried to grab my lady's throat. That was enough for me. He was an idiot. 1	Joe: I broke a man's wrist once because he called me a poof. What more reason do you need to break a wrist? Or a neck for that matter. 0
EVER SEEN PORNOGRAPHY THAT MADE YOU FEEL SICK?	Oh yeah, a video of a farmer having his penis sucked by a calf – I couldn't eat beef for years. 1	Joe: Yes. I found a friend's porn collection and he had a DVD called Ouch! You're Hurting My Stinkhole! It was a new word to me that; "stinkhole". And it did look like her stinkhole was hurting. 1
EVER LOST A SMALL FORTUNE ON A BET?	No, but I lost a small fortune to a deceitful, arsehole accountant. I hope you rot in hell, you bastard! 0	Adam: I've never understood throwing away money on a bet. We're not really gambling men. 0
EVER BEEN ARRESTED?	Yeah, back in the day for shoplifting. Also for obstructing a flight – I spat on someone. Passengers can make you really angry. 1	Adam: We almost got arrested once but we got off with a warning, when we used to steal posters from the London Underground. I think the male cop wanted to get off with the female cop so he let us go. 0
EVER HAD A SHIT OUTDOORS?	Please, I'm in a band – we play festivals – of course I have! 1	Joe: Surely everyone's done that? I've never done a crap on the pavement, though I've seen a very fat woman pissing in the road. The jet coming out of her was just like a horse's. 1
EVER STARED DEATH IN THE FACE?	I once had a knife held up to my throat by an unhappy "supplier" of goods. I like to think it was a case of mistaken identity. 1	Joe: Yes. I took some very bad mushrooms and couldn't move or think. In fact, I actually thought I was dead. 1
EVER SMASHED SOMETHING IN A MOMENT OF ANGER?	Yeah, my toe in a lift in a Blackpool hotel. The pressure just got to me. It was too much – the donkeys, my parents, the band, my wife, the rain – so my big toe took the full impact of the attack. 1	Adam: I'm a big smasher of things in anger. I've smashed tables, cupboards, I'll kick things. I'm ashamed of it – I do it about twice a year and it really frightens the people I'm with. 1
CAN YOU DRAW A HORSE? TONY HART COMMENTS	"This is a superb and beautiful stallion. I'm not sure what's actually happening towards the back end of this horse, but the artist really has captured the essence very well. Pass!" 1	"Well, it really is a rather jokey horse, but never the less, I quite like it. It has spirit and imaginative portholes!" 1
FINAL SCORE	A beefy seven for Tim, whose band's new album, Up At The Lake is out on May 17. 7	But just five for the lads, who you can catch on Xfm every Sunday afternoon (on digital channel 864). 5

Manuel's poo would have to wait until after the manicure

BY THE TIME YOU'VE read... thus far in this oh so clever sentence, we could have pummelled hot lead into your sorry torso 4.7 times. Gun slinging numberdom has foretold it! For FHM is not draped in this cowboy regalia for an impromptu trip to a "man bar". Nor are we poncho-clad because we're too fat for regular attire. Though that does hold water. Nope: we're learning how to dispose of scum in the blink of an eye, with real life (albeit part-time) cowboy, Ian R Banks. The fastest gunslinger in all of West Sussex. Till someone caps him.

So, spilled an angry tyke's Blue WKD down the pub? No time to administer any fancy "Bru" Lee – he'll glass you before you've even finished your bow. But – and by which we mean, never do the following – wear a holster that, like Ian's, is armed with a 19th Century Colt Peacemaker and almost certainly you can avoid a painful brawl by shooting the little fart Clint Eastwood-style, mere milliseconds after the barney's kicked off. Well you can, according to ol' Banksy, because until Tony Martin gets justice, murder may just lead to further trouble with the law. But hold on: British fastdraw champ Ian has a Sheriff's badge! In our books, he is the law. Let's shoot! LC

Had you guessed yet? That's right! The Good, The Bad And The Ugly, Special Edition DVD is available from April 26 for £19.99. Great film. If you like Westerns. Utter pap if you don't.

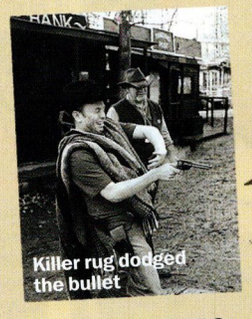
THE GOOD

(...bit of a day spent with cowboy Ian)

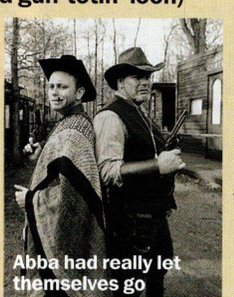


Killer rug dodged the bullet

"Some like a seven-inch piece, some find a five-incher easier," explains coach. "I think you're best pulling my five-inch gun." Girly giggling subsided, we're taught how to whip "gat from holster" in a "thumb busting fan draw." Or how, in one swift move you release the gun with your right hand, flick the pin back with your left, squeeze the trigger... and pray.

THE BAD

(...when meeting a gun-totin' loon)

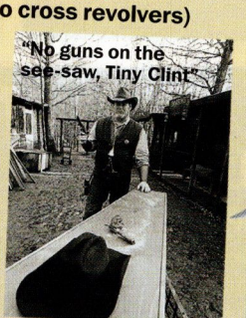


Abba had really let themselves go

"All this is fair enough," interrupts the fastdraw champ's cowgirl, "but I prefer that film with Clint Eastwood and the chimpanzee." Chimpanzee?! Surely even primates themselves know Any Which Way But Loose's Clyde is an orang-utan. Resisting the urge to pepper cowgirl with lead, FHM instead challenges hubby Ian to a duel....

THE UGLY

(...finally we get to cross revolvers)



"No guns on the see-saw, Tiny Clint"

We stare down the burly stud, position our trigger finger, just above the holster, and BANG! No blood, but the quickdraw computer reveals that FHM drew and shot in 0.506 secs. Alas, the gunslinger opposite did it in 0.278 secs. Technically of course, we'd both be dead, but the wily old coot's already had our coffin measured. Ooh, is that the time? Best be off. Twonk.

Cowboy shooting wasn't all we found down South. See page 35 now!

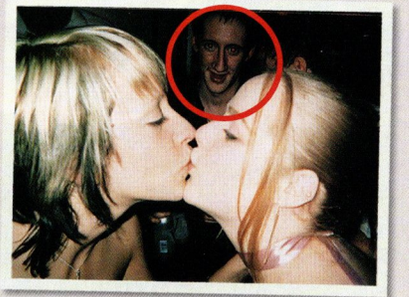
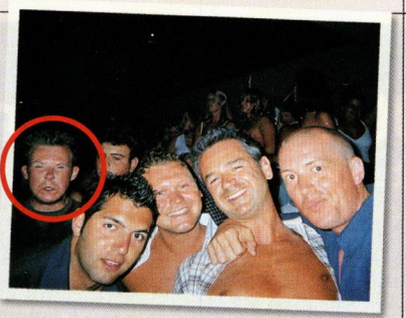
Bullying hijacked!

"We taped our sleeping friend's head to the seat during an eventful bus trip," laughs Somerset juvenile, Seth Robinson, clearly something of a bus-dwelling prankster. "No idea who's behind him though." Which isn't nearly as funny.



Lesbians lure letch

While ogling this snap of his "girl-friends snogging", Dudley native Dan Earl – master snapper of all things female – was "right miffed" to find, "some dodgy bloke letching in the background." Frankly, we're surprised he even noticed.



Turtlehead squeezed back

"We were having a great time showing off our nipples," scribbles exhibitionist-friendly Essex boy, Jamie Moran, "but I don't think the snarling loon found it funny at all. Do you?"

Low-life scum

"I've no idea, so please tell me – who is the gimp behind the bar?" asks Somerset pervert PJ, overlooking the man in the pink catsuit. "But more importantly," he adds, "...is he holding a dildo?" The filthy little monkey.

Make a phone call – save a beast's hide

MAKE NO MISTAKE: we trotted off to Phones 4U excitedly clutching these snaps... only to discover the store couldn't live up to its frankly boastful name. The plastic brick they eventually sold us was most definitely not the phone "4" us – utterly devoid, we noted, of the claw/fang/whiskers combo of this magnificent blower, the mighty Jaguar phone booth! Currently languishing street-bound in the sweaty town of Primavera do Leste in sunny Brazil, it isn't the only animal-ist box on offer. Tourists about to be capped by fearsome locals can make a frantic call to the bribe-friendly cops from a giant fish phone booth, too. But why? "Authorities moulded these phone-boxes on endangered animals, to promote the heritage of Pantanal, the world's largest undisturbed wetlands," so says someone who said that without – can you believe it – advising us that Bill Payer, whoever he is, needs to be asked before making any calls. And there certainly wasn't any mention of international call rates applying. The cheek! LC

Watch Euro 2004 on a plasma telly!

See England win the cup – probably – on a humungous big screen thing

EURO 2004 IS ALMOST UPON US... and therefore Comet – the electrical store with a stellar sound about it – have decided to celebrate. Indeed, to ensure that you don't miss a foul, shot, whistle, dive, pout or kick during the tournament, Comet are offering one FHM reader the chance to win a state of the art Sony Home Entertainment system worth over £4,000.

This incredible prize package includes the latest in Sony technology: a massive 42" Plasma TV (complete with wall-destroying mounting bracket) perfect for watching all the matches on; a DVD recorder, and a Dolby Pro Logic 2 Surround Sound system, making this almost as good as being at the ground.

No idea who Comet are? Well doofus, they offer a fine selection of plasma and LCD TVs. Check out the range by visiting www.comet.co.uk, or pop in to your local store. Which is simple because there's more than 250 throughout the UK. You can even shop on the phone! Call 0845 600 7002. Now, how's about entering this competition?

For the chance to win, send your details on a postcard marked "Comet comp" in to the usual address. Terms and conditions apply. Closing date is May 28. Good luck!

Other half: fiancé Richie, currently in Basra

LIKE ALL BRILLIANT things, it started off as a chinwag in the kitchen. "All them Brit soldiers out in Iraq. And all their good-looking girlfriends left behind. Man, what a waste..." Of course, it was a chat that was going nowhere, but with the conversation left lingering overnight – maturing like a veiny Stilton – a plan was cooked-up in the morning and sent buzzing around the globe via the interweb.

Get this: we're shooting the best-looking Squaddie girlfriends in Britain to print in FHM. It'll be a visual extravaganza... something to gloat about amongst the boys... and a change from all those yashmaked horrors scrabbling around looking for bread. So: a call to all far-flung Brit Squaddies, and a call to their girls, too. Chaps: if your lady's a peach, convince us by sending some snaps in. And girls: if you want to give your fella a treat with a fancy London photo, then convince us of your honeyness with some precious, private photographs. MP

Send pics and all saucy details to: FHM Babe Battalion, FHM, Mappin House, 4 Winsley Street, London, W1W 8HF. Too lo-tech for you? Then e-mail: warbabes@fhm.com

'That's no balloon...'

Oh but it is! And it's a frog. Best find out all about it, scamp

HERE'S A LITTLE-KNOWN gem: the grey tree frog can survive even though its heart stops beating. How? Well, unlike your pasty gran, the amphibious beast ingeniously forms its very own antifreeze which prevents the body from freezing up completely. A thoroughly fascinating morsel from herpetology you'll agree, but nothing whatsoever to do with this particular frog.

No, this pond-life is actually a gigantic hot air balloon, which appeared in the skies not so long ago during the Canberra Balloon Fiesta, Australia.

The fiesta attracts balloonies from all over Oz and as you can see, also stops all vehicles dead in their Brit backpacker-spattered tracks. Something Canberra PD was evidently mighty narked off about: "There have been a number of accidents involving cars running into the back of others," they ranted during the event, before violently clubbing a nearby balloonist to death for a parking violation. Actually that's not true. But balloonies of the world, take heed: our roads are safer without you! LC

Be quick, I'm famous!

James Nesbitt gives us a few precious seconds while dressed as a Catholic priest surrounded by some old nuns

So come on then: what's better money? Yellow Pages, Cold Feet or voiceovers?

None of your business! Oh, alright then: Yellow Pages – by a country mile. But I'm not saying how much. And we all get cheques when Cold Feet's repeated around the world – not much, but we've all done well.

But you've earned it – ie that scene in Cold Feet where you had a rose inserted into your hairy hoop...

Thank God they de-thorned it. I had a very macho dresser called Chris, from Manchester, whose job it was to, er, put it in. After that day, I heard he left the business and never worked again. Not too appetising a job, really: me, lying there waiting in a pouch. A big pouch.

You had to emphasise the "big" there, didn't you?

It needed reinforcing, yes. But the pouches are very uncomfortable: they Sellotape the front of a jockstrap onto your pubes.

Is it the strangest thing you've had to wear?

Yes, probably. Although as we speak, I'm dressed as a Catholic priest, surrounded by lots of old nuns. It's for Murphy's Law: I'm going undercover in a convent. My mother would have a fit.

You only seem to play Irish characters. Can't you do any other accents?

Tch – yes. I'm doing Scottish in a new film called Quite Ugly One Morning, and I did a Doncaster accent in Playing The Field. The one I just can't crack, though, is English – you know, received pronunciation.

Has anyone actually mistaken you for a real copper yet?

No. Ooh, but I was nearly arrested. I had to headbutt someone in this scene – but suddenly this policeman came tearing up the street. He'd mistaken me for a homeless thug. Easy mistake to make, obviously. CB

Sexiest Uni 2004

With a little help from attractive female students, FHM's seeking out the land's sexiest university!

MANY MONTHS back FHM began its search for the UK's sexiest uni. First up, should memory serve correctly, London's Royal Holloway entered a bid. Then... it all got a touch blurry – a lagery haze of debauchery the nation over, meeting, greeting and generally going slightly bonkers with the UK's ripe-bodied female students. And Li'l Lee. Thirsty work indeed.

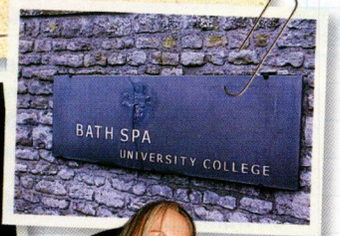
And the search is by no means over, continuing this month in that erstwhile hotspot of Roman depravity, Bath Spa.

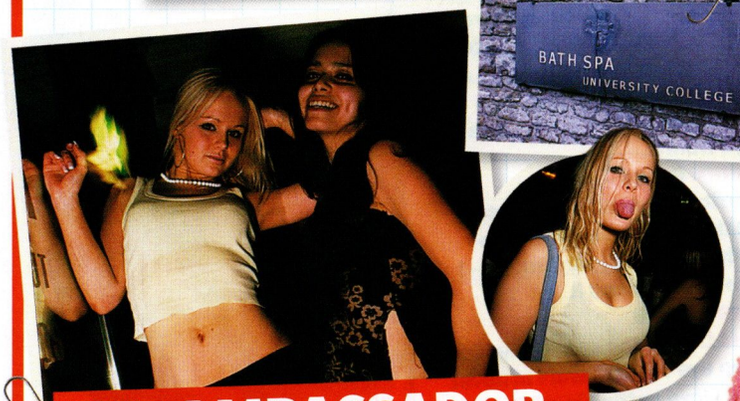
But maybe your university can claim to be the sexiest in all the land? Then, student ladies, do this: send us some pictures, a letter and maybe we'll come to give you a (briefly) life-altering FHM shoot. Then, in a year-end online poll at fhm.com, everyone can vote for which uni they thought was the sexiest of all those we visited. The winning uni gets an FHM bash, the girl takes two grand for her effort. Good luck!

THIS MONTH: BATH SPA UNIVERSITY

THE CAMPUS

Bath Spa uni is something of a dwarf campus: just 4,065 undergraduates in all. Shameful? Not when 60 per cent are female, bucko! And here are the courses with the most females/chance of you safely breeding: Textiles and Fashion has 46 females (93.9 per cent of the course); a close second is Food Nutrition and Consumer Studies (er... eating and shopping, then) which is 92.7 per cent female!





THE AMBASSADOR

She's not shy. And with that body, 21-year-old Jodi Colquitt is perhaps Bath Spa university's finest psychology and business studies student. Which is precisely why she sent FHM a letter in the first place, advising that we haul ourselves west with a camera and snap away. No problem!

MEET JODI!

Psychology student Jodi Colquitt has a few ideas about how men should behave...

STEP INTO A COLLEGE bar and the various types of student can be spotted a mile off. The bobble-hatted geography student supping a murky stout. Or the art berks juggling in the corner, organic brew in hand.

Thankfully Psychology and Business Studies student Jodi bucks the trend, being anything but a scary female version of TV fatso Cracker. Just hear the svelte 21-year-old...

"I could be tempted to pose for a nude shoot," she reckons. "I think it'd be fun!" And the confessions don't stop there.

"I've kissed other girls loads of times," Jodi admits. "It's nicer with girls as they're so much softer. When it comes to sex, men need to follow girls' leads more and learn just what women like." DM ▷

LADIES!
Send us your pictures now and we could be coming to your uni to give you an incredible FHM shoot of your very own! Wing that envelope to "Sexiest Uni 2004" at the usual address.

JODI'S STUDENT STATS

Likes: Happy people! Shopping, eating seafood and Holland – I used to live there.

Loves: Rock music. I used to be really into it and went to all the gigs until I got kicked in the mosh pit and got a black eye from it.

Hates: Banks – they're horrible. Cleaning my house all the time – everyone I live with is so messy. And rugby – I don't understand it.

Breasts: 32B

Best trick in the sack: I love to keep eye contact and I'm never lazy. I love putting in all the effort to make sure my man enjoys himself.

THE FHM STUDENT NIGHT

What's this? A student neglecting to tell us the university was on holiday? We should have seen it coming...

Fireflies: like to watch

ACCORDING TO www.bathspa.co.uk, no-one's actually splashed their bits in the city's fetid orgy pools since 1978. But hurrah... thanks to a government grant of £7.78 million the new baths are opening this year! Why do we know this? Simple: we read the entire Bath Spa website. Why? Because we had nothing else to do. There was no-one at Bath Spa university when FHM should have been visiting for a wild night out with this month's student honey, Jodi. They'd broken up. A tiny oversight born of the forgetful creature Studentus BoneIdleus.

But no matter. Mere days after the original plan had evaporated, foolproof plan B was hatched and FHM found itself neck-deep in women, in Bath – but sadly not a bath – in one of the wash-pit's newest bars, Revolution.

Indeed, we were reliably informed (which is a first) that student ladies aplenty flock to this trendy abode where, as you can see, women kissing other women ranks high on their "stuff to do" list.

Next month: FHM tries to get it right. Want to be in the running for Sexiest Uni 2004? Send us your pics – and holiday dates – now!

THE LAB!

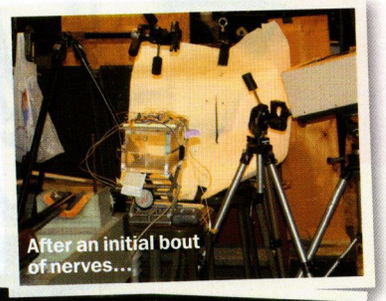
Where grown men do deadly things...
Because we want to and we can

The speed camera!

Terrorism aside, blowing stuff up is always a right hoot... especially in slow motion

WELCOME TO FHM'S LAB. Before we commence scientific madness, a word from the brass: "Tell those firebomb-happy animal-loving maniacs that there are no caged monkeys being forced to smoke here." So there: FHM's monkeys only smoke when they want to. Oh but of course they don't. There are no monkeys, no cages... no mind-altering activities of a top secret classified nature whatsoever. Truth be told, there isn't even an actual lab.

And this isn't a first, either. The Lab's inaugural appearance came in May 2003, when "scientifically" we shot stuff with an air rifle. Continuing that theme, here's more of the same. But done properly. Cue Yankee brainiacs Josh Weaver and Jeff Lieberman from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (super-clever place Stateside). These two geeks put their technical wizardry and stash of high-speed cameras to good use. In science speak? Here's the slow-mo results after we shot, popped, punched and blew shit up. JC



After an initial bout of nerves...

KNIFE WINS GUNFIGHT

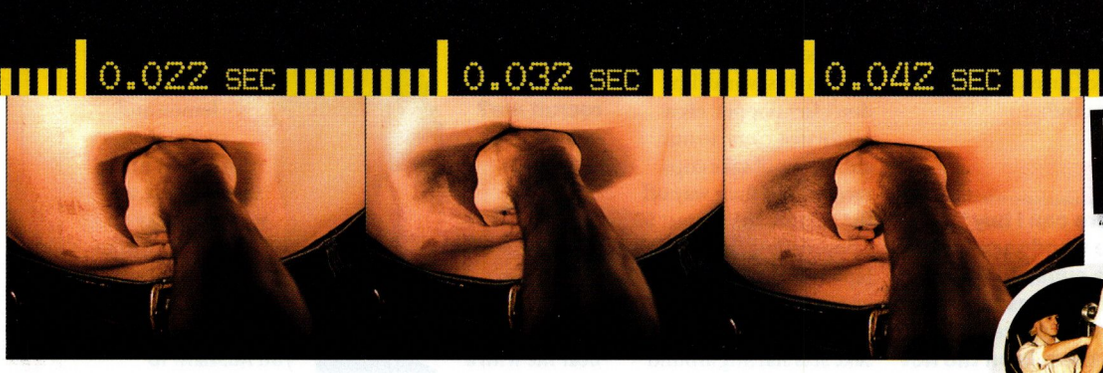
Behold something you've never ever seen before. A lead bullet moving at 1,200 feet per second is split in two after hitting a SOG Navy SEAL knife. Since a typical camera's flash is too slow to catch a bullet on film, Lieberman smartly designed a laser system that triggers a micro-strobe, which is 1,000 times faster – that's a brain-bending 1/1,000,000 of a second. "We still didn't know where the bullet would go after it hit the knife," Lieberman says. "So we did test shots with inch-thick plywood set around it. If we didn't hear bullet fragments bouncing off the lab's walls and no-one got shot, that was a pretty good sign."

CORK MIMICS SEX

"A test cork shot off accidentally," Weaver says. "We clocked it at 45 mph." Amazingly, the cork expanded to nearly twice its diameter in 1/100 of a second. Predictably, the wood fled and the gush ended soon after.

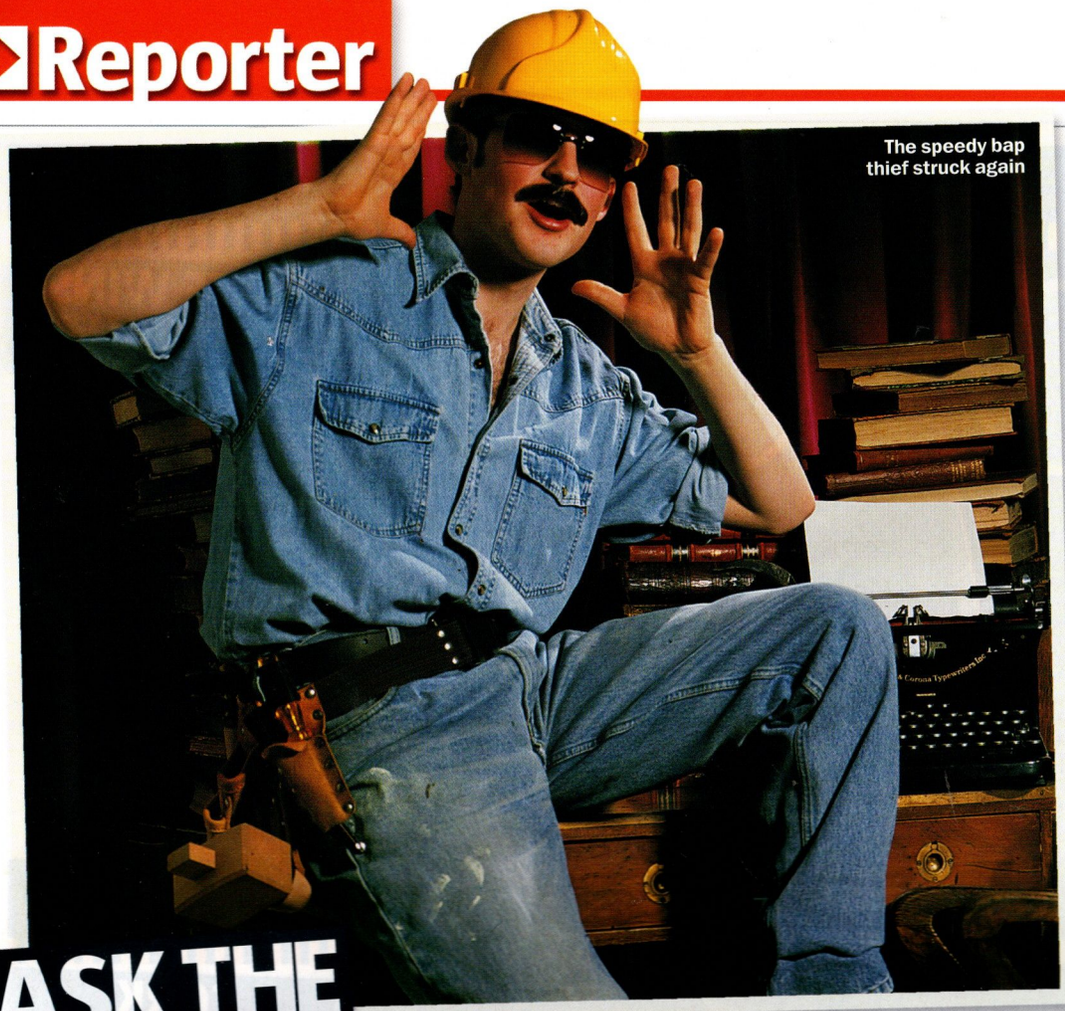
FIRECRACKER BALLISTIC

To capture this explosion, they used a $80,000 Photron video camera and snapped images in 1/8,000 of a second. "It was like an upside-down rocket engine," Lieberman says. "It moved a foot in 1/50 of a second."



PUNCH STIRS GUT WAVE

"Waves travel faster in solids than in air," Lieberman says. "The fat rolls are moving close to the speed of sound." To record impact, they used a scorching 5,000 watts of light. Cool.



The speedy bap thief struck again

ASK THE BENDER

We're still not sure about his pink desk or his 'throw', but FHM's new columnist, The Bender, just wants to help!

THERE ARE CERTAIN conundrums that neither the straight man nor heterosexual woman can answer. Does a full-bodied moustache (perhaps of the Toastmaster-style) tickle when in contact with roughened man skin? Can two men waltzing ever be deemed erotic? Leather chaps: where did they come from and what do they want? Have a straight man, a straight woman or worse, both, pitching in their two pennies worth and what you have is chaos.

Cue the all-knowing insight of the homosexual male. He knows what men think... what women think... what men who think they're women think... and what colour might best suit the walls in a soon-to-be decorated room. In short, he's a bloody know-it-all. Which is why it's good to have him here, answering any and all of your problems. So e-mail bender@fhm.com and he'll do his best to help out. Now, let's see what magic Queenie's worked this month...

Dear Bender

Where can I buy those little wooden square sake cups, as seen in Lost In Translation? The only place I can find them is on the net by companies who don't ship to Europe.

TOM, VIA E-MAIL

Dearest Tom (I love that name), I am so with you on those cups – aren't they just the best? And you know what? I almost cried at the end of the film. Still, having trawled my own local High Street, there does indeed seem to be a serious absence of sake cups in this world. But don't fret poppet: eBay might just come to our aid. A pair of sake cups recently bid their way off the auction site for just $2 a pop. Failing that, online Japanese retailer www.mountfuji.co.uk sells just the cutest little sake sets starting around £20. They've even got a "bear sake set" – and you know how much I love a good bear! Standard delivery charge is added at £4.95. A small price to pay for such drinksware perfection, I'm sure you'll agree! Toodle-pip.

Dear Bender

Two male friends keep acting gay. Both claim to have girlfriends, but one is ginger and the other is hung like spaghetti. Are they just trying to recruit me?

ROB, BURTON-ON-TRENT

Dear Rob, Spaghetti? That doesn't sound good at all. No man would get near me with a pasta-thin penis, I can tell you right now. And ginger? I'll let you into a little secret, tinker: they're no more acceptable in the gay man's world. My advice is simple: if you know you're not gay, tell them so. If you're even mildly curious, let them flirt away and then secretly masturbate yourself into a mucky frenzy over their advances when alone at home. Alternatively, you could invite both of them to sleep with you and your woman. But that's just filthy. Isn't it?

Helmets: just like custard

Dear Bender

Just once, I'd like to stay out until the early hours without the danger of being so drunk come pub closing time that I have to retreat home to be sick. Any advice?

JIM, LONDON

Dear Jim,

Absolutely: don't drink. Ha! Don't drink! As if... Anyway, why don't you take a leaf out of the gay man's book – that's right, the pink one with glittery pages – and try supping a few designer cocktails? You could start with a Manhattan which is 3/4 oz Sweet Vermouth, 1 1/2 oz Whiskey with a dash of bitters. You'll probably hate it, but don't wince. And don't down it! That's an order. As for other fine cocktails: a Singapore Sling (Cherry Brandy, Gin, lemon and sugar) always slips down my throat nicely, and who could say no to a White Russian (Kahlua, Vodka, Cream)? Certainly not me, Jim. Are you Russian? TB

The Bender is a genuine homosexual, and that's him in the pics... heavily disguised in a suitably camp get-up, as the world's not quite as PC as he'd like. Yet. Photography: Adam Lawrence

Donkey derby

This here is the highlight of many an Italian's spring...

DO ITALIAN DONKEYS understand only Italian? Always worth a ponder, that – but doubtless not a conundrum consuming this lot as they gallop wildly on during the Palio degli Asini donkey race, literally hauling ass around the Italian village of Torrita di Siena, Tuscany.

The race on Sunday follows St Joseph's Day (March 19) and forms just one harebrained part of a series of cultural events throughout the month. Among the entertainment on offer: parades of musical bands and, bizarrely, a show of huge tambourines. So the donkey race is quite rightly the pinnacle of the knees-up. According to leathery-faced, billion-year-old villagers, donkeys "suddenly stop or turn in other directions" mere metres from winning the Palio degli Asini. Drunk men falling off donkeys? That's March 2005's holiday sorted, for sure. GB

● Sport is now inflatable. Sport In A Bag is a new range (well, football and cricket only thus far) of equipment that comes in a rucksack, ready for inflating at will. Kickabout at the beach? The park? Mid-funeral? No problem! £17 for the footy set; £13 for the cricket set. See www. sport inabag.com

● The answer to Odd One Out (page 43) is Vanessa Feltz. Did you guess? Probably not. The others were all born in India. They're also all men, probably a lot less bulky than Big V, and Spike Milligan, even in death, is still more entertaining. Of course the real dilemma is "would you?" If she asked? Really, really nicely? Multiple answers rock!

● More football: this time, on your fridge. Fridgefootie is a six-a-side magnetic game which, claim its makers, is "addictive, fun and challenging". A microsecond's fun whilst pilfering beer more like. But hey, it's only a tenner! See www.fridgeplay.com

● Single? 20 to 40? Reasonably attractive, intelligent and funny? Then New Woman magazine wants you for a feature where you get to date gorgeous New Woman readers. Because practice makes perfect...

Ask The Honey!

Our High Street Honey 2003, Kayleigh Pearson, takes time out from cavorting on paparazzi-ridden beaches and opening supermarkets to answer your saucy queries...

Dear Kayleigh

I have a real thing about my lady's feet, and would love to give my woman a good foot massage then suck her toes. Do you think she would enjoy it? What's the best way to approach the subject?

ADRIAN, VIA E-MAIL

First of all, don't be worried about the reception a spot of pinky-nibbling will receive. Every girl loves having her feet pampered – why do you think we buy so many shoes? As for how to go about it, when she comes home from work, get her into a relaxed mood by having something bubbling on the stove and something bubbly in the fridge. Tell your girl to take the load off, then ease her out of her shoes and get to work on her feet. Use your thumbs to make slow, firm, circular movements on the ankles, sole and toes, making sure you don't tickle and spoil the mood. Use soap and water as a lubricant – and as a way to get those dogs back to morning freshness – then start "shrimping" by taking one toe at a time into your mouth, teasing and sucking. Up the ante by moving onto full-body, then remind her that the best massage is a two-way thing. There's even the possibility of giving her a "three-handed" massage. Guess what's the third hand...

Dear Kayleigh

One of our flatmates shags his bird quite loudly – and she's a real screamer. Why can't some girls keep quiet when they're in the sack?

JOHN & CHRIS, LONDON

For many women, letting go vocally is an essential part of climaxing – and you wouldn't want her to come away from your flatmate's bedroom short-changed, would you? Those little groans also provide a vital bit of feedback to a sensitive lover, as well as a job-well-done piece of aural back-slapping at the end. One solution to your problem – and frankly I have no idea how you're going to introduce this into the conversation – is to suggest that it might be sexier for her to experiment with a bit of role-playing, and try her hardest to stifle those screams. Imagining you're indulging in risky, we-might-be-heard sex can be a winner, like imaging your parents are about to walk in at any second and catch you at it. Works for me!

'Start by taking one toe at a time into your mouth, teasing and sucking'

Dear Kayleigh

Is it ever okay to stare at a stranger's cleavage? After all, if she's wearing a low-cut dress, isn't that exactly what she wants? Is it my fault her boyfriend/my girlfriend gets angry?

MAX B, MANCHESTER

I'm glad you've brought this up, because as you can imagine I've been a victim of "straying eyes" myself – and I've also been guilty of gawping at another woman's breasts! I'm fascinated by them – and so is my man! So take it from someone who knows: a glance is flattering (that's why we wear low-cut clothes, after all) but a stare can be creepy. Be discreet, and you'll find that your girlfriend is probably doing the same thing. It's the game everyone can play.

Meet our Honey! Kayleigh will be appearing at the Max Power Live motorshow at the NEC, Birmingham, July 2 to 4. Book tickets via www.maxpowerlive.co.uk or call 087090 20444.

Ladies' Confessions

Saucy disclosures from females who dare to dance with FHM. This month: two ladies get familiar, a boozer gets messy, an ingenious plot, a sweaty car journey and sex on the slopes

Nightlife is blinding

I was out for a drink with some mates in Manchester when this horny guy started chatting me up. It wasn't long before we were rushing to find a quiet spot to get down to some frisky business. Kissing and groping, we both made a grab for each other's rude bits. He pushed my head down so I would blow him, but I just started off by wanking him slowly and playing with his balls. It was all going well but suddenly he creamed into my right eye! To hide the shame, I had to pretend to my friends that I was crying because I'd hurt my foot rather than simply being jizzed on.

PHOEBE, MANCHESTER

Dare not Truth

FHM FILTH OF THE MONTH

A few months ago I was having a party at my house because my parents had gone out and weren't expected home till the early hours. Me and my mates were all getting drunk and so we decided to play Truth Or Dare. Everyone was choosing truth and it was getting boring, so I asked my boyfriend to think of a good dare to give me. When it came to my turn I chose a dare and it was for me to get it on with my best female mate. So we were in the middle of the room having a good snogging, me with my tits out, when suddenly all went quiet. I stood up to see my parents standing at the door! I have never been allowed a party since, and they think I am in denial about being a lesbian because I am still with my boyfriend.

Cunning plan

My fella and I were on the verge of breaking up although we still lived together. One night I was out on the tiles with my friends and met up with a hunk I knew from the gym. Things between gym hunk and me started hotting up and I thought, "What the hell?" and took him back to my house. We got down and dirty on my bed when I heard a taxi pull up, and to my horror, it was the ex. Panic ensued but as ex had no key, he obviously couldn't get in. So, he started trying to prise open the window whilst ringing my mobile. Crafty as I am though, I thought up a plan; I rang his mobile and when he answered he started shouting, "Open the door, I'm outside!" to which I replied, "I'm at my friend's house and can't get a taxi home, walk down and meet me halfway." Bearing in mind this is four in the morning, the ex then dutifully walked away from the house to my friend's to make sure I got home safely. My gym hunk and I got dressed and left the house, he flagged down a taxi, dropped me off near the friend's house I'm meant to be at and I then proceeded to walk up to meet my ex. Genius!

NICOLA, VIA E-MAIL

Car trouble

I was at home with my boyfriend, feeling very horny. Unfortunately my mum was also in. So we had the idea of going for a little drive! It didn't take me long to begin sucking on his cock. The pleasure was so great for my boyfriend, he couldn't control his speed and drove through a speed camera without even noticing. Two weeks later, his mother received a letter with a fine for speeding and included was the picture from the speed camera with my head clearly sucking his lolly!

DIPTESH, VIA E-MAIL

Suspenders cause suspense

After receiving a rather sexy bra and thong set from my boyfriend for Christmas, I decided to supplement it with the matching suspender belt. The ensemble produced the desired effect and we both had a very satisfying night together. But about a week later I decided to return the suspender belt in order to raise a little cash. As I removed it from the bag, the efficient shop assistant asked if it had been worn. "Oh no," I responded confidently, "it's completely unsuitable." Then, to my horror, under the bright store lights I spotted a wiry, spiralling pubic hair standing to attention in the sheer net fabric. Beginning to glow, I stood my ground hoping she wouldn't notice. It wasn't until the assistant used her long, perfectly manicured nail to scratch away at a newly visible, white crusty patch that I cut my losses, grabbed the lingerie and ran out!

ANON, BRISTOL

Gondola gets steamy

Last Christmas my bloke and I were snowboarding in Austria. One afternoon a whiteout forced us to leave the mountain early and we got a gondola all to ourselves. Not ones to waste an opportunity like this we started snogging as soon as the doors closed. It wasn't long till his board pants were around his ankles and his cock was in my mouth. It wasn't until he'd finished emptying his load that we noticed the gondola had a CCTV camera. Sure enough, as we left the gondola we were greeted by three sniggering lifties, the last of which shook my boyfriend's hand…

FHM Erotique

The missus will normally get a bit sniffy when she finds 'erotic pamphlets' in your drawers. But no more! Simply purchase one of the glossy tomes on show here and justify it with our man's gassy justification!

APART FROM THE sprawling Abbey Brook Cactus Nursery and a pervading stink of seaweed at low tide, there's precious little memorable about the sleepy south coast resort of Worthing. But if the town council were to stop debating the registration of care homes for a minute, they'd be erecting a plaque on the seafront to photographer Bob Carlos Clark – because while a student at Worthing College of Art the shy young Irish lad took his first ever glamour shot. By simply acquiring a camera, Clark managed to persuade the best-looking girl on his course not only to give him the time of day but put on a mini, sit on a 650cc Triumph Bonneville and, a year later, marry him. A career had been born.

Thirty years later, Clark's portfolio is packed with prints of the world's most beautiful women diddling themselves, squeezing into rubber catsuits and lezzing up for the sake of art. Or more often for the sake of cash, for Clark has turned himself into one of the world's most successful ad-men, making a fortune along the way and, as he tells all in this entertaining autobiography/art-book, shagging himself ▷ senseless. Sadly for many of us, skill with the lens won't be enough to replicate the Irishman's cheery snapping/screwing formula: Clark pops up now and then and we can see he's a handsome devil too. Bastard.

Shooting Sex by Bob Carlos Clarke is £35 from the Erotic Print Society (0871 7110134).

'BUT IT'S ART, DEAR...'

Verbose bullshit to justify your purchase, from the educated mouth of Regulars Editor Matthew Bingham...

Girls On The Sofa

This month: Lapdancers

Five stars of the north-west's lapdancing circuit take a trip to London town and spill the beans on schoolgirl outfits, swinging clubs and a randy guide dog...

Ladies, you must be minted – what's been your biggest tip?

Gina: I got offered £2,500 to sleep with a bloke on his stag night. I said no... but I was really tempted.

Nikki: I got a £100 tip from a guy in Blackpool, from talking to him at the bar.

Candy: It depends whether you're nude or topless...

Kelly: I do a better dance topless. If you've lost your pants you can't raise your leg, but if you keep your pants on you can do whatever you want. You've got a lot more movement.

Candy: You can do a lot more straddling. Even a tiny thong leaves something to the imagination.

Do you have a favourite dancin' outfit?

Gina: My PVC nurse's outfit. It's wipe clean!

Kelly: I always find the schoolgirl goes down well. Men love a really short skirt, long socks and bare bum peeking out.

Nikki: They love me naked, apart from suspenders and fishnets.

Charisma: My favourite is the "secretary": jacket, bra and pull-ups.

Candy: Nice. I prefer PVC and bondage.

Kelly: My favourite one's my American cop's outfit. I always wear thigh-high boots to protect the knees!

Sounds hot – do men often get a lob on?

Gina: All the time...

Kelly: In Blackpool on stag nights, the men are often dressed in women's outfits. They'll have on a little G-string and skirt – you can see a lot.

Gina: I once made a bloke come in his pants!

Kelly: I danced in a swingers' club once. All the customers were dressed in nothing but a towel. I was standing on someone's lap so I could get my crotch in his face, and noticed a couple stroking and fingering each other in the corner while staring at me.

'I noticed a couple fingering each other while staring at me. I didn't know where to look'

You must get some pretty odd customers...

Kelly: There are some who want to take you on holiday and buy you gifts and...

Gina: ...do your washing! One guy regularly turns up with big bags in the hope that I'll give him some dirty laundry to do!

Nikki: A blind bloke came in once and wanted a dance.

Kelly: He said he just liked the smell and the closeness.

Nikki: His dog liked it!

Candy: That dog was horny!

Nikki: We get underage guys coming in all the time too. It's hard to keep a straight face.

Kelly: You sometimes get parents bringing in their shy son for a dance for his 18th birthday! The poor lad leaves all shell-shocked and the parents are like, "Well done! Well done!"

Classy. After spending all night being sexy, are you gagging for it when you get home?

Charisma: Sometimes you're working 14 hours, so maybe at the beginning of your shift you fancy it, but by the time you're finished, you're knackered.

Nikki: After a long shift, I'm a big fan of my Rampant Rabbit.

Kelly: Customers always say, "Your boyfriend's so lucky." But I don't walk round the house in thigh-high boots and crotchless pants! Although I do practise in the bedroom, try on new outfits...

Gina: You can't be prudish in the sack doing what we do. ▷

Photography: Adam Lawrence. Hair: Kate Hughes and John Burchall at Carol Hayes using Paul Mitchell and Pantene Pro V. Make-up: Mandy Wysom at Time using Ruby & Millie and Gok Wan

You've got to be up for anything.
Candy: And dancing gives you more confidence and bedroom skills. We're all very flexible!

You can't turn on the TV these days without seeing a lapdancer do her stuff. Ever pick up any tips?
Charisma: When I very first started dancing, I watched Striptease every morning. It's like, yeah, that's what it's going to be like!
Gina: I bought Showgirls, but you really can't beat a bit of porn.
Kelly: Jenna Jameson really gets me going. Or Briana Banks, she's gorgeous.
Charisma: It's Angelina Jolie every time for me!
Candy: No, I'd love to get it on with Pamela Anderson.
Gina: You can't beat Jordan. She's like one of us.

Do blokes bring their girlfriends to the club?
Candy: I've had loads of couples. They'll sit there together and you'll have to dance for both of them.
Gina: You make more money with couples!
Nikki: I feel less threatened dancing for women, you know they're not going to try and grab you.
Charisma: It's sometimes odd doing a dance for a bird as she's got to sit with her legs open, and if they've got a skirt on it can get awkward. Especially if she's not wearing pants!
Kelly: Some of the women get more excited than the men. They'll sit there and really have a good rub!
Nikki: I was dancing for a couple when they started diddling each other. She was loving it. A woman also invited me home for a threesom.

What would you do with another woman on stage?
Gina: We all do girl-on-girl. Lots of stroking and touching.
Nikki: I'm up for anything.
Candy: Me too. Men love girl/girl stuff. They're dumbstruck when we start fondling each other.
Gina: They like kissing best, though – they can't get enough of watching women kiss.
Kelly: That always gets the biggest cheer. When you kiss, you get a standing ovation.
Nikki: Me and Candy used to pretend we were lesbians to get dances. We'd walk into the club holding hands and feeling each other up.
Kelly: I did a two-girl show where there was soap on a sponge and we soaked each other, rubbing foam onto each other's breasts. But she flicked the sponge and the soap went straight into my eyes – I couldn't see a thing, but had to finish the remaining five minutes! I was blind for two days!

'I was dancing for a couple when they started diddling each other. She was loving it. A woman also invited me home for a threesome'

Ever dated a male stripper?
Candy: No way. They're more obsessed with themselves than you.
Gina: Yeah, they're worse than girls. I'd much rather have an ordinary bloke.
Kelly: And you'd have to help them out with pumping and tying-up their knob before a show.
Nikki: We know these two male strippers in Blackpool who apparently got sacked for letting girls give them blow-jobs in the changing room before they came on.
Kelly: One night, when I was working in the swingers club, there was a male stripper on. The women in the audience were frightening! One woman had her finger up his bum!

How can we get our ladies to do a lapdance for us?
Nikki: It's all about the ambience. Get them in a sexy outfit, select the music and off you go.
Kelly: My top tip would be to not go too fast. Every girl will go too fast first time.
Candy: Guys like you to go slow and touch yourself a lot. You could stand there for the whole three minutes touching yourself – they'd just be hypnotised.
Nikki: Lots of rubbing nipples is good.
Kelly: And of course, wine helps to loosen a girl up!
Gina: I'm always plastered and falling over. I once pulled down the curtains in the private dance room because I was shit-faced. And if all else fails, offer your lady a tenner! FHM

Hugh Jackman

The Van Helsing star on gay porn, Halle Berry and being sodomised by kangaroos...

So, Van Helsing. We hear it's an action-filled role...
Absolutely, yeah. I'm swinging on ropes and trapezes and I'm dragged away by vampires, so I spent quite a bit of time in a harness. My goolies got caught in a harness during X-Men, so this time they made one especially for me. I've become a bit of a diva in the stunt world. It's comfortable, I can fly free and easy now...

What, your boys were out?
No, there's none of that, not yet. That was my early career. I did a couple of porn movies – we all start somewhere, mate. Actually, my wife recently walked past a video store in New York and saw the movie Ice Age. My son Oscar had seen it on a plane and liked it, so she went in to buy it. And while she was paying, she realised that behind the counter were all these dildos and strap-ons and there was Oscar right at the back of the shop – which was of course a porn video shop – looking at the gay porn section. And there's a guy with this huge cock on the front cover and he goes, "Look mummy, it's daddy!"

So does your lady often pay visits to porn emporiums?
Well Rudy Giuliani brought in a law to try to clean up the city, that every video store had to carry at least 20 per cent of non X-rated material. So they put just normal videos on the front, they had Ice Age in the window, but inside it's all porn.

And your son runs straight to the gay section...
It's a worry, isn't it? But I don't think there was a choice in that shop, I think it was all gay porn...

And Ice Age... We hear that your favourite pub is the Nag's Head in Norwich.
Yeah I know, it's where I grew up and learned to play darts, watching John Lowe and the Crafty Cockney. When I was 16 all I wanted to do was watch and play darts. When we came to England my brother and I were just amazed that we could drink in the pubs. So all we did was drink and play darts. At 11am we'd be in the pub and it used to close at two and not open until six, so we used to go home and watch it on TV from two till six. It's frightening, isn't it.

You told FHM Collections that your favourite items of clothing are your fur-lined Ugg boots, which are unforgivably gay...
Are they gay?

They're massively gay. They're only worn by Sloaney, Primrose Hill, fashionista women...
Ah, man, yeah, but they've gotta be black and not knee-high.

So they're suddenly okay?
They're black, and they're like the size of a boot, and they're not gay. [Asks his publicist] John? My Ugg boots, are they gay? John says they're not gay. He says they're out of style, but they're not gay. It's like, look at me, if you haven't got me already: I like the Nag's Head, I play darts, I watch the rugby and I wear Ugg boots, it's not very gay.

Well, not until you add the Ugg boots...
Yeah, and the smoking jacket.

Don't even start with the smoking jacket. Being Australian, can we take this opportunity to mock you about the rugby?
Aah, I can't believe I'm going to say this, but I was surprisingly not depressed when we lost because I thought it was a fitting ending. I really thought it would have been wrong if we'd won, and all the Australians were saying that, too, which is unusual.

Because you're very bad losers.
Shocking losers! In the cricket, we're shocking losers. Shocking winners, too. We're so bloody proud of ourselves. I know the Australian cricket team isn't the most loved in the world.

Well, they are the world's best sledgers...
They are, they're great sledgers. You guys invented the gentlemen's game and then we destroyed it.

Yeah, cheers. Now you're an established A-list star we've got to ask this question: who's the most famous person you've had a piss next to?
John Travolta.

And what was he packing?
Ha ha! I didn't look, man. I'm a genuine, straight ahead guy. I like reading the adverts above the urinal, thank you very much.

Pleased to hear it. Is it true you were sodomised on Saturday Night Live by a comedy kangaroo?
There was a skit with Will Ferrell playing my dad, and it was me telling the story of what Christmas is like in Australia. I'm sitting in an armchair, saying in Australia it's a little different because if you've been good, you get presents and if you haven't, then a kangaroo sodomises your father. Cut to Will Ferrell being sodomised by a guy dressed up as a kangaroo.

So how would you prepare for that role?
Ha ha! Well, this is true, of course. When I grew up, my father got sodomised repeatedly...

By kangaroos?
Yeah, because we weren't very good that year.

Fair enough. You've appeared with some of the world's most attractive women. Your lovely wife aside, who would you pick?
Mate, Halle Berry.

Fair enough. For the famous breast-baring scene in Swordfish, was it a closed set to spare Halle?
They were trying, and it was pretty closed. The good, or bad thing, for me was that they had to shoot it over three days. On the first day it was sunny, but freezing cold, so you could tell that Halle was cold, if you know what I mean. Then the next day it was cloudy, so by the third day Halle was very much at home. So it took three days to shoot that scene.

Three days of looking at Halle Berry's breasts. Have you got the best job in the world?
I always do my own off-camera work. Always.

You've got a bit of a reputation of being an unfeasibly nice bloke. Are you happy with this, or would you like to debunk it?
Come on, I've admitted in this interview that I wear Ugg boots, that my son peruses gay porn...

That your dad gets sodomised by kangaroos...
And that I've started my career in porn movies, so I think I might have debunked it, but look, I'm a pretty nice guy, except for the people I love – I like to hit them around a little bit. No, not really, just my kid, it's what I like to call character building.

And finally, like your Antipodean counterpart

Q Halle or Rebecca, who's got the best norks?
A I'm going to get into such trouble here...

You've shared the screen with both Halle and Rebecca Romijn-Stamos, where their boobies were on display for a considerable amount of time. So, who's got the best norks out of the two of them?
Ah man, I'm going to get into such trouble here.

Of course you are, that stands to reason. So just make a decision!
I'm going to have to call that a tie. They are both such excellent examples of the mammary gland.

Russell Crowe, now you're a star, can we expect you to put on seven stone and inflict a rubbish soft-rock band on us?
Ha ha! Well I'm a lanky bastard, so if I could put on seven stone, I would try. No, but you'll probably see me in rehab in a few years. Although there may actually be a rock band...

Not Van Helsing, the musical?
Oh God, I hope not. FHM

Interview by Rory Buckeridge. Van Helsing hits cinemas on May 7.

When it comes to springing models on the world, Brazil never does it by halves. Stand tall – on your tiptoes in fact – for the high and mighty Gianne Albertoni

DENSE FORESTS teeming with life, golden beaches, open ranges and majestic mountains; Brazil is a bursting natural beauty. Not least on Copa Cobana beach where Rio's ample-butted beauties bounce along in the sunshine, causing all manner of swimsuit bother for both local and tourist males alike.

It's little wonder then that the world's modelling agencies swoop on the South American honey spot to mine the next generation of sex bomb clothes horses. And as you well know, the hottest model in the world, Gisele, calls the country her home. With this in mind FHM is proud to introduce 22-year-old Gianne Albertoni. A model since the age of 13, the Sao Paulo-born beauty is a veteran of the world's catwalks having previously modelled for the likes of Prada, Versace and Armani.

And while that's all well and good, we felt you'd prefer this little introduction to focus less on the catwalk and more on the model herself. So, sporting Brazil's greatest cultural export since Pele – the thong that is – and very little else, behold the new Gisele...

So after visiting Britain, what do you think of our men?
I have only been in Britain for a month so I haven't met a lot of British men. I love London but haven't met any men.

We imagine there are quite a few who'd like to meet you. What kind of men do you go for?
Funny and kind, and it helps if they like me.

Quite likely. You're very tall (5ft 11in). Do you have a height restriction on boyfriends?
Not really. I have been out with men who were smaller than me

'You can't go topless in Brazil. Take your T-shirt off and you go to jail' but my boyfriend now is the same size. But I have a friend who is very tall and her boyfriend is small. They look cute together, especially when they hold hands.

How long are your legs?

Ha, I don't know. But they're long!

Not that we're complaining but what's with all those thongs in Brazil?

I am from Sao Paulo so we have no beach. But in Rio, they love to go to the beach. It's a hot country so people wear small bikinis. Also they don't want to have tan lines on their ass.

Like I said, we're not complaining. Are you a thongstress?

Pardon?

Sorry, do you wear a small bikini at the beach?

Yes, sometimes. Why not? But you cannot go topless in Brazil. Take your T-shirt off and you go to jail.

But what a holding cell!

Pardon?

Never mind. So you've never been topless, then?

Well, you can if you're on a boat or a private beach.

And have you ever been to a "private beach"?

Maybe once or twice.

Brazil has quite a violent image. Ever had any bother?

It is very violent, there are a lot of problems. Lots of poverty and you have to be careful on some streets. I don't ever walk alone in the evening. You have to keep all the doors and windows locked on your car. I have seen someone get robbed while a gun was pointed at their head.

Not nice. Rio is famous for its carnival. Ever been?

I usually have to work during carnival because of the fashion shows in Europe. But I have been before. It's amazing. I love to dance, having fun with my friends.

What's your tipple of choice when you get all silly at the Mardi Gras?

Pardon? ▷

To us caffeine is like the hour between 2am and 3am on the last Sunday in March.

Because even though we lose the hour when we put the clocks forward, the day is still a day, Songs of Praise is still on the television and you still have to pop round and see your gran. It's the same with caffeine. When we at Nescafé take it away from our beans, our decaffeinated coffees still have the great flavour and fresh aroma of our regular coffees.

'Fashion disasters? I did fall over on the runway one time'

Your favourite drink? Are you a Caipirinha fan?
I find the cachaca [the meths-like Brazilian spirit used to make Caipirinhas] very harsh so I have mine with vodka. But to be totally honest, I like champagne best.
Do you know Gisele?
Yes, when she started she had the same agency as me in Brazil so I've known her for a while. We're not the best of friends but we always catch up at fashion shows.
Do you get a lot of guys coming on to you?
Not so much, I think they're afraid.
We can understand that. What's the weirdest fashion job you've done? Ever had any disasters?
Nothing too weird but I did fall over on the runway one time. It was back in Brazil, the floor was wet because they were trying to ▷

Final question, Brazil is also famous for the Brazilian wax. Are you a patriotic exponent?

The "what" wax? What is that?

You know, a Brazilian. Where a lady gets her private parts...

What is this wax?

Oh dear. [There follows a protracted attempt at explaining what a Brazilian wax is which includes lots of pointing at the genital area and the phrase "famous ladies get them". Until...]

Ahhh! You mean like to shave! No I don't do that "wax" it hurts too much. Some of my friends do it but not me. You have to wait for your hair to be long, and I work everyday so I can't do that. It wouldn't look too good! FHM

You know that boring cack about Global Warming – how the ice-caps are melting and, er, all that stuff? Well... it's true – and last month, the US Senate's top brass stormed into Mr Bush's office carrying a big file marked, 'Oh, Shit...'

DECEMBER 2019, AND BRITAIN is under martial law. If they catch you outdoors you're in for a kicking because of a strictly-enforced curfew – so you stay inside wondering just how much more leccy you can use before you exhaust your feeble allocation. Parliament was dissolved when the ice storms came in November, and the Cabinet has fled to nuclear bunkers under Whitehall. Not that they'd have been able to co-ordinate anything from Westminster; the Houses of Parliament are shrouded in colossal snow drifts and Big Ben is half buried in a tightly-packed tomb of snow and ice. Across the Atlantic, Los Angeles has disappeared under floodwater as the Sierra Nevada mountain range shrugs off its age-old blanket of snow. Police boats scour the former streets for survivors – and for supplies that can be put to use feeding and clothing the millions of shivering starlets now sheltering in the Hollywood hills. Meanwhile the Hague, the centre of European policymaking, is a desolate wasteland. The droughts of the previous five summers grew longer and more unforgiving by the year. The secret report

Okay, so you've got to suspend your disbelief for a couple of seconds to take in such a catalogue of madness, but a growing army of experts say the above scenarios have a very – very – real chance of happening. They are based on key findings in a leaked Pentagon-funded report on climate change, a frightening document which claims abrupt changes in the weather could bring the planet to the edge of anarchy as countries develop nuclear weapons to try and defend and secure dwindling fuel, food and water supplies. Nuclear conflict, mega-droughts, famine, Siberian winters and widespread rioting will erupt across the world – in as little as 20 years' time.

Right now, contingency plans are hurriedly being drawn up in Washington to defend the nation against Armageddon: America thinks it's in for a seriously rough ride and is responding in typically self-absorbed way. Not surprisingly, their plan is simple: the United States must be preserved at all costs.

'Abrupt changes in the weather could bring the planet to the edge of anarchy'

Of course, not everyone in the Capital Building is quite so excitable. Republican Senator James Inhofe has publicly insisted that, "Global warming is the greatest hoax ever perpetrated on the American people and the world."

But who cares what this crusty loon thinks? Bush's men are telling their guv'nor that Ma Nature is about to crack open a 10 million gallon barrel of whupass – and they're all secretly bricking it. Which probably means we should be too.

The creeping killer

Mark Lynas, author of High Tide: News From A Warming World (Flamingo Books) explains how we got ourselves into this monstrous pile of environmental shite: "It's because we've burned billions of tonnes of oil, coal and gas, as well as chopping down most of the world's forests," he says. "We now know that there are more greenhouse gases left in the atmosphere from all this burning than there have been for millions of years. Temperatures are rising faster than at any time in human history. And much worse seems to be just around the corner."

As for the Siberian winter that the report warns will hit Britain between 2010 and 2020, weirdly, this too is caused by global warming. Here's the science bit: the UK is kept relatively mild in the winter by a blanket of warm air brought to us from the Tropics by a branch of the Gulf Stream. But if global warming continues to melt major ice sheets, that supply of toasty air could come to an abrupt end. The Stream relies on a sensitive "conveyer belt" action, which would be switched off – quite suddenly – if it became diluted by fresh water from the melting ice-sheets. When this happened last time, it brought about the Ice Age. Worryingly, NASA has measured catastrophic increases in the melt speed of some of Greenland's largest glaciers; melt-water on the Greenland ice sheet in 2001 was twice that recorded 10 years ago.

"It will be quick," says Dr Terry Joyce, an oceanographer from the acclaimed Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute, USA. "Suddenly one decade we're warm, and the next decade we're in the coldest winter for 100 years, but we're in it for a 100 years." Dr Bill Turrell, from the Marine Laboratory, Aberdeen, who has measured a drop in the Gulf Stream's salinity (the first warning sign that the current could be set to collapse), agrees: "These changes are fundamental. They are substantial. They are going to impact our climate and the climate our children have to live in." ▷

FLOODS

'Who cares about global warming?' you cry, 'It's not going to happen for years. When I'm dead.' Guess again buddy, Mother Nature's mighty pissed-off already...

CALIFORNIA, USA, 1997
$33 million of Californian property was washed away by the mega-floods that followed a particularly savage storm.

CHINA, JULY 1998
The rain-swollen Yangtze River left thousands homeless after rising continually for two feet per day.

UK, NOVEMBER 2000
Britain was battered relentlessly by the worst gales to hit the country since 1987.

TAIWAN, AUGUST, 2001
Rescuers in Taiwan found just 72 of several hundred bodies swept away by landslides and floods caused by a Typhoon Toraji.

PERU, FEBRUARY 2002
Flooding and rains left tens of thousands homeless in the south east of Peru.

LA PAZ, BOLIVIA, FEBRUARY 2002
The city was devastated in a couple of hours by a savage storm that left over 50 dead.

SHAANXI, CHINA, SEPTEMBER 2003
Up to 120,000 people in the northern province were relocated and 10,000 homes were destroyed after continuous rain for two weeks.

The facts

You've probably read the "official opinion" of some old duffer from a worthy meteorological society – he's the one scoffing at the very notion of global warming. But consider the evidence: a study released by the World Meteorological Organisation last year made it quite clear that the world is experiencing record numbers of extreme weather events. Well over 500 tornadoes twatted the United States in May 2003 – far higher than the previous monthly peak of 399 in June 1992 – while a pre-monsoon heatwave which hit India caused peak temperatures of between 45 and 49°C. Switzerland, meanwhile, sweltered in its hottest June in 250 years, and in the south of France hairy-armpitted ladies were soaking up temperatures between five and seven degrees warmer than the long-term average. England experienced its hottest month since 1976 (and our hottest day ever); Australia was bitch-slapped by the longest drought in recorded history; and many parts of China and East Asia were knocked for six by severe flooding. As Mark Lynas puts it: "How much more evidence do we need?"

And this environmental carnage is accelerating. According to the National Climatic Data Center, America has sustained 58 weather-related disasters in which costs reached or exceeded $1 billion between 1980 and 2003 – 49 of them occurred in the last 15 years. The total cost of this meteorological mayhem is conservatively estimated to be $220 billion. Meanwhile, in the UK, the Energy Savings Trust submitted a White Paper to the government in which they calculated that 180,000 businesses, 1.8 million homes and 3.5 million acres of land are at risk of flooding as sea temperatures rise. Half the properties in the London region of the Thames – which house 750,000 – are in jeopardy, and the cost is put at a hefty £222bn.

'Boffins reckon that a million of the world's species could be extinct by 2050'

Death and devastation

But of course, it's not just the financial cost of climate change that's set to shake the world. Tens of thousands of people died in the examples above, and much worse is to come. In a report published last year called "Extinction Risk From Climate Change", boffins from the UN Environment Programme calculated that a million of the world's species could be driven to extinction as soon as 2050 – a quarter of animals and plants living today. While the thought of some spiny iguana quietly disappearing from a far-flung shore is not going to make us lose too much sleep, the impact on humans could actually be devastating. Says Dr Klaus Toepfer, the head of the programme: "If one million species become extinct, billions of people – especially in the developing world – will suffer too as they rely on Nature for such essential goods and services as food, shelter and medicines."

And that's where war, rioting and mass migrations come in. If a country gets flooded or suffers a drought, the crops won't grow, the farmers will go bankrupt, their staff won't have jobs, their suppliers won't have anyone to sell to, shops won't have any cheap food and pretty soon the whole economy will be screwed. History tells us that the nation will then begin fighting with itself or lashing out at neighbouring countries to claw back an income.

A March 2004 report by Barry Smit and Robert McLeman from the University of Guelph, Canada concluded: "Climate-related disruptions of human populations and consequent migrations can be expected over coming decades which will have implications for the security community." The study pointed to countries such as Pakistan and Bangladesh (whose projections of rainfall suggest there will be mass flooding) as prime candidates for mass exodus and anarchy in the streets.

Fortress Britain

But it won't just be sodden Bangladeshis that'll be pounding at our door. According to the Pentagon report, whole populations will be sent scattering all over the globe: "violent storms" ▷

EARTHQUAKES

PAPUA NEW GUINEA, NOVEMBER 2000
An earthquake measuring eight on the Richter Scale shook Papua New Guinea, triggering at least one tidal wave. Rabaul and Kokopo were hit by the wave and the quake was felt up to 400km away.

GUJARAT, INDIA, FEBRUARY 2001
A ten-day rampage of earthquakes killed at least 30,000, injured 55,000 and made half a million homeless in 2001.

BAGHLAN, AFGHANISTAN, MARCH 2002
More than 2,000 were killed and 20,000 left homeless by the massive quake.

UK, SEPTEMBER/OCTOBER 2002
A highly unusual series of 38 tremors shook Greater Manchester, with the strongest measuring 3.9 on the Richter scale. These were preceded by a 4.8 strength quake that hit Dudley a month earlier.

XINJIANG, CHINA, FEBRUARY 2003
"Hundreds" were killed last year when a quake measuring 6.8 on the Richter scale hit a region just outside Jiashi city, China.

BAM, IRAN, DECEMBER 2003
Iranian officials now estimate that 41,000 were killed by a Boxing Day quake, which also destroyed 70 per cent of the city's buildings.

An Ethiopian famine ravages the landscape once again will smash coastal barriers rendering large parts of the Netherlands uninhabitable by 2007; "Riots and internal conflict" will tear apart India, South Africa and Indonesia; frosty-lipped (but reassuringly good-looking) immigrants from Scandinavia will "seek warmer climes to the South"; 400 million people in subtropical regions are at "grave risk" of flooding and crop failure; and water will become a vital – and much fought over – resource, with the Nile, the Amazon and the Danube all mentioned as "high risk". Soon, rich areas such as the US and Europe will become "virtual fortresses."

"Stopping global warming is incredibly simple," says Mark Lynas, who has trudged the globe to document evidence of global warming. "All we have to do is eliminate fossil fuels like oil, coal and gas from the energy equation. The problem is that everything we do from agriculture to transport is based on them. Society is addicted to these fuels." And that's the problem: Mark's solution is unlikely to appeal to anyone in the Western World apart from poo-caked hippies.

'400 million in subtropical regions are at risk of flooding and crop failure'

Inevitably, worrying about future misery often brings on the hurt prematurely: fears of conflict, unemployment and economic crash usually send shares tumbling – in 2002 such a triple-whammy sent the US into a spiralling decline. And yet 20th Century history indicates that disaster almost always represents a stock-buying opportunity. As Jeff Fisher of Fool.com explains: "There are plenty of wars in history that teach this lesson. If you had bought stock at the outset of any major war in the past 90 years, you'd have achieved above-average returns." And the sort of companies worth ploughing your shiny pound into? Arms manufacturers, water purification companies, security agencies, flood prevention consultants and manufacturers, producers of non-perishable foodstuffs, survival and camping retailers, umbrella makers (okay, maybe not umbrella makers)...

The bottom line

As with all doomsday scenarios no-one but the big fella upstairs knows whether or not we're in trouble, but FHM's convinced – and the extra-thick jumpers are on order. But we'll leave the last word to a proper expert. Says Mark Lynas: "Everything we know about the long-term behaviour of the climate is that rapid catastrophic change is not just possible, but likely. It's important to understand that this Pentagon report is not science per se – it is about visioning different plausible scenarios, such as the shutting down of the Gulf Stream. This could certainly happen – it has done before, thousands of years ago through natural processes. But this time it will be humanity's fault, and the problem is we've got no way of predicting it, and won't be sure until it has already begun to happen and the changes are irreversible.

"Once Judgement Day comes," he muses, "it's going to be too late – just as the Pentagon scenarios foresee, it will bring mass conflict, starvation and ecological collapse. Better not to go there." FHM

DROUGHT

ERITREA, NOVEMBER 2002
Half of the Eritrean population were "effected" and a further 900,000 faced starvation. 400,000 tonnes of food aid required to feed the country.

ETHIOPIA, 2002 TO 2003
The worst drought in Ethiopia's history left 11 million facing starvation; a similar number to those hit by the 1984/1985 famine.

ZIMBABWE, FEBRUARY 2003
The UN claimed that seven million people (out of a total population of 11 million) were in desperate need of food aid in the ravaged country.

ZHEJIANG, CHINA, JULY 2003
More than one million people short of drinking water, and 200,000 hectares of crops were damaged in the eastern province.

VLADIVOSTOK, RUSSIA, SEPTEMBER 2003
The Russian city declared a state of emergency following an acute shortage of water. Authorities admitted that the situation had spiralled out of control.

AUSTRALIA, 2003
The country was hit by its worst drought in a century, which ruined vast fields of crops and damaged exports.

SWAZILAND, FEBRUARY 2004
A national disaster was declared as a result of ravaging drought and the spread of HIV/Aids. A quarter of the population needed food aid.

COUNTDOWN TO EXTINCTION

Watch the calendar, look to the skies, pray like Moses...

2006
Britain swelters in its third consecutive hottest ever summer.

2007
Violent storms smash coastal barriers rendering large parts of the Netherlands uninhabitable.

2010
Global mean temperatures rise by five degrees: polar ice caps melt far faster than usual.

2010 to 2020
Britain's weather patterns begin to resemble those of Siberia.

2010 to 2020
The Gulf Stream "switches off".

2012
Bangladesh becomes virtually uninhabitable due to the rising sea level.

2013
Drought-induced famine across the world claims millions of lives.

2014
Rich areas like the US and Europe become virtual fortresses to prevent millions of migrants from entering. Southern Europe is overwhelmed by refugees. Riots and internal conflict tear apart India, South Africa and Indonesia.

2019
Access to water becomes a major battleground. The Nile, Danube and Amazon are all war-zones.

2020
Nuclear arms proliferate. Japan, South Korea and Germany develop nukes, as do Iran, Egypt and North Korea.

2050
A million of the world's species become extinct.

Siblings rob bank

It is truly rare for teenagers to offer a helping hand – especially to their own mothers – so it was something of a shock when 14-year-old twins Chelsea and Alicia Jones helped their ma rob a branch of America's Sun Bank at gun point in November 1992. Unfortunately for mum, Kath – waiting in the getaway car – one of the twins took off her balaclava in the car park and the FBI were soon on the trio's tail. All three were charged with armed robbery. Investigation leader Detective Michael Duffy huffed: "14-year-old girls steal lipstick, not rob banks."

Serial killer confesses

After being arrested in July 2001 over a toddler's disappearance, 13-year-old Jummai Hassan from Maiuguri, north-east Nigeria stunned police by confessing to a total of 51 murders. She – oh yes, she – admitted to being a member of a cult and jibbered: "We attend meetings at a church in Lagos where instructions are given to us as to which body parts to take."

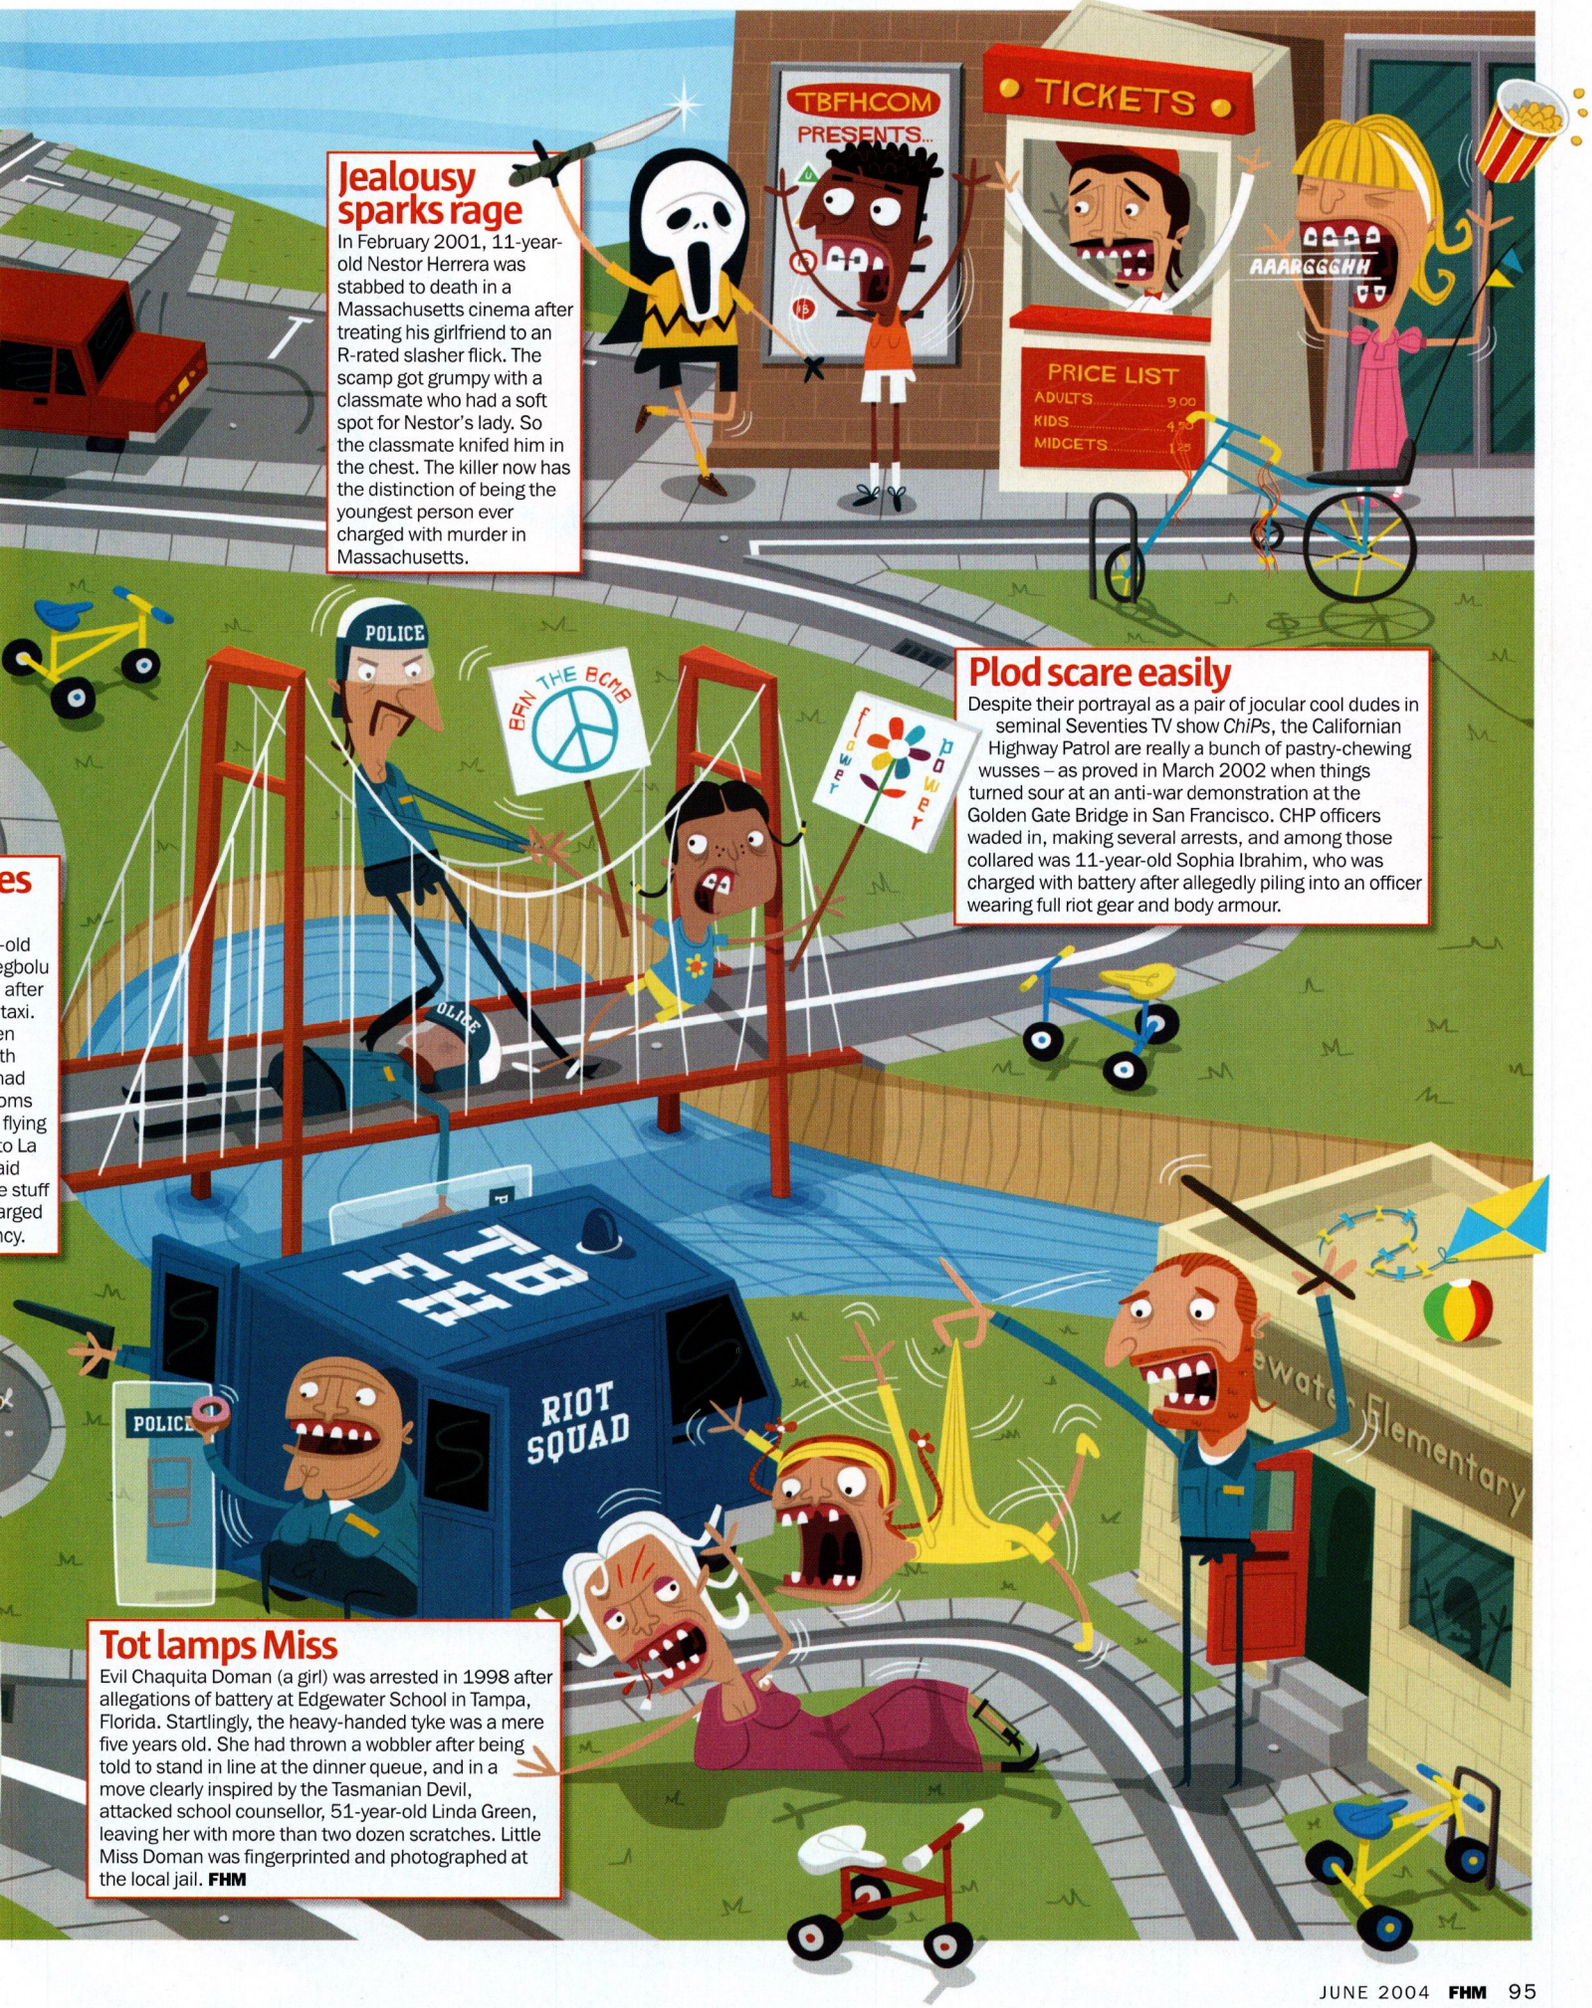
Teen loves heads

Japan has seldom been shaken (apart from by earthquakes) as much as it was on May 27, 1997 – the day that teenager Jun Hase was decapitated and his head left outside the gates of his school in Kobe. A note was stuck in the youngster's mouth which read: "I desperately want to see people die. I think it's fun to kill people." Hilarious – but not so funny when the culprit was nabbed. Mentalist Seito Sakakibara, 14, confessed to killing two other people, and won't even be considered for release until 2005.



Jealousy sparks rage

In February 2001, 11-year-old Nestor Herrera was stabbed to death in a Massachusetts cinema after treating his girlfriend to an R-rated slasher flick. The scamp got grumpy with a classmate who had a soft spot for Nestor's lady. So the classmate knifed him in the chest. The killer now has the distinction of being the youngest person ever charged with murder in Massachusetts.

Plod scare easily

Despite their portrayal as a pair of jocular cool dudes in seminal Seventies TV show ChiPs, the Californian Highway Patrol are really a bunch of pastry-chewing wusses – as proved in March 2002 when things turned sour at an anti-war demonstration at the Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco. CHP officers waded in, making several arrests, and among those collared was 11-year-old Sophia Ibrahim, who was charged with battery after allegedly piling into an officer wearing full riot gear and body armour.

Tot lamps Miss

Evil Chaquita Doman (a girl) was arrested in 1998 after allegations of battery at Edgewater School in Tampa, Florida. Startlingly, the heavy-handed tyke was a mere five years old. She had thrown a wobbler after being told to stand in line at the dinner queue, and in a move clearly inspired by the Tasmanian Devil, attacked school counsellor, 51-year-old Linda Green, leaving her with more than two dozen scratches. Little Miss Doman was fingerprinted and photographed at the local jail. FHM

PERHAPS IT HAS PASSED you by, but the Classical Brit Awards are happening this month. Unlike The Brit Awards – its drug-taking, booze-guzzling, record-company-expense-account-abusing cousin – the Classical Brits (The Clits anyone?) is a very sedate affair. More cheese and wine than beers and lines, it's a chance for those kids who were bullied at school to come together and talk about semi-quavers and clarinets and stuff. But let it not be said that we here at FHM are an uncultured lot. In fact, over the years we've been massive supporters of the fine arts. Don't believe us? Well, not only have Vanessa Mae and the classical pop band Bond appeared in their smalls in this very mag – so, on a number of occasions, has our very ▷ good friend Myleene Klass. As we're sure you're all aware, Miss Klass has left the world of pop music behind and is now a bona fide classical music star – as verified by her nomination, for the second year running, for the Classical Brits. So as genuine patrons of the arts we called upon Myleene to explain to us the vagaries of the world of classical music – all while she straddles a piano in her pants. If you're listening Nigel Kennedy – you can thank us later.

How do you feel about FHM being a champion of classical music?
Ha ha! It's fantastic. I tell you what, if I win one I'll thank FHM live on stage.
It's only what we deserve. Are the Classical Brits a sedate affair compared to the real Brits?
No way – it's more drunken and rock and roll than the other Brits. There are people so far gone that they can't speak.
Can you see yourself getting drunk and offering Vanessa Mae outside – à la Robbie and Liam?
Not me no, I really admire Vanessa but it can get very heated.
Do all the classical music types get a bit flushed and tongue tied when you come by?
No, they are all very welcoming and friendly. I was concerned they would shun me because I came from the pop world but they were great.
The flick American Pie has a famous line about "band camp". Did any form of sexual awakening happen for you during the learning of a musical instrument?
Ha ha! Oh yeah, you often saw the Vicar's Daughter Syndrome happening. You know, they get away from home and go wild. The practice rooms are a hot bed of teen action. Did I get involved? Unfortunately not. I watched, I was a voyeur.
Ever had sex on a piano?
I don't know a music student who hasn't, ha ha! It's notorious in music school as a venue for shagging. You lot should have gone to music school, you really should!
In this issue we have the lovely Abi Titmuss and have constructed the Titmuss Test as a rating system for girlfriends. Can you take the test for us? How do feel about these statements: "Kissing girls is lovely."

times but not in a "sexy" way. I prefer kissing boys.

"Watching porn is great for lighting the spark."

Well I've seen some and had a giggle at it. I just can't stop thinking about how much of it is faked.

"There are plenty of home videos in my drawer."

I think it's more fun to make your own. Have I ever done it? I reserve comment on that as anything I say will get me into trouble!

Well that's a clear "yes" then. Okay, next one – "Orgies? I was a willing participant."

No, I'm pretty private when it comes to the bedroom – there should just be the two of you there. It would be too weird for me.

Haven't your record company insured your hands for a cool million quid?

Yes, it's true! It's made me very aware of my hands. Do you want to touch £1000,000 worth?

Indeed we do. If you were hard up would you ever be tempted to lop one off and claim?

Ha ha, if I was having trouble with the mortgage I could lose one, I guess! No I like my fingers exactly the way they are thank you.

Good lord, we've gone an entire FHM interview without mentioning your hooters. How are they these days?

Ha ha! They're perfectly good thank you. I'm very happy with them.

Gossip mag Heat reckons you've gone from a 34D to an average B cup – is this tragic news true?

Ha ha, no way. They went from a double F to an "average" D – if there is such a thing!

Thank God. And finally, Jodie Marsh told us that to keep hers in tip top condition she applies cocoa butter to them – do you have a boob-based routine?

Not really, but I do swear by a good bra. I get mine from Rigby & Peller – they make bras for the queen you know? I'm a big fan of lingerie. I spent so much once I had to call up my accountant and warn him that the bill was going through. It was four figures. I felt very guilty, but my guy was very, very grateful. FHM

JOIN US AS OUR GLOBE-TROTTING SCRIBE CHRIS BELL BETS HIS WAY AROUND THE WORLD!

EPISODE 4: AUSTRALIA

Unsurprisingly massively in arrears in his quest to bet his way around the world, our gamblin' traveller bowls up in Ozland this month, desperately trying to break even...

CHOPPER RUSSIAN ROULETTE

WORDS: CHRIS BELL
PHOTOGRAPHY: ANTHONY CULLEN

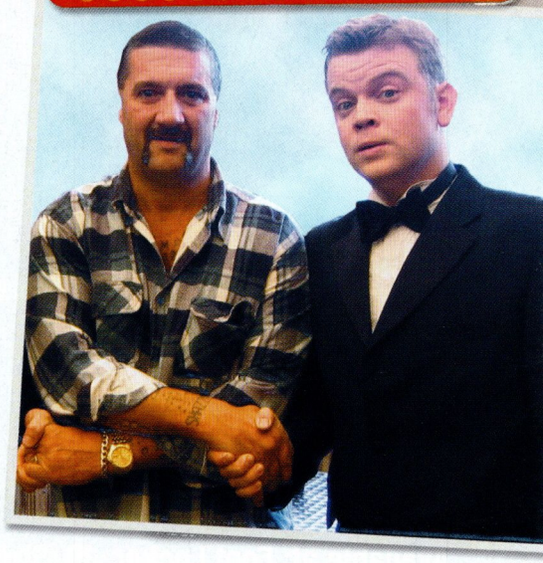
"I BLEW THIS BLOKE'S LEG OFF IN St Kilda in 1976. He just needed fucking shooting. Had one leg too many. I'd loaded me shotgun with cubes of windscreen glass – the shards took his leg clean off. Me mate said he'd fall backwards, but I went for sideways – my dad always says they do. And yeah, sideways he fell, like a sack of potatoes."

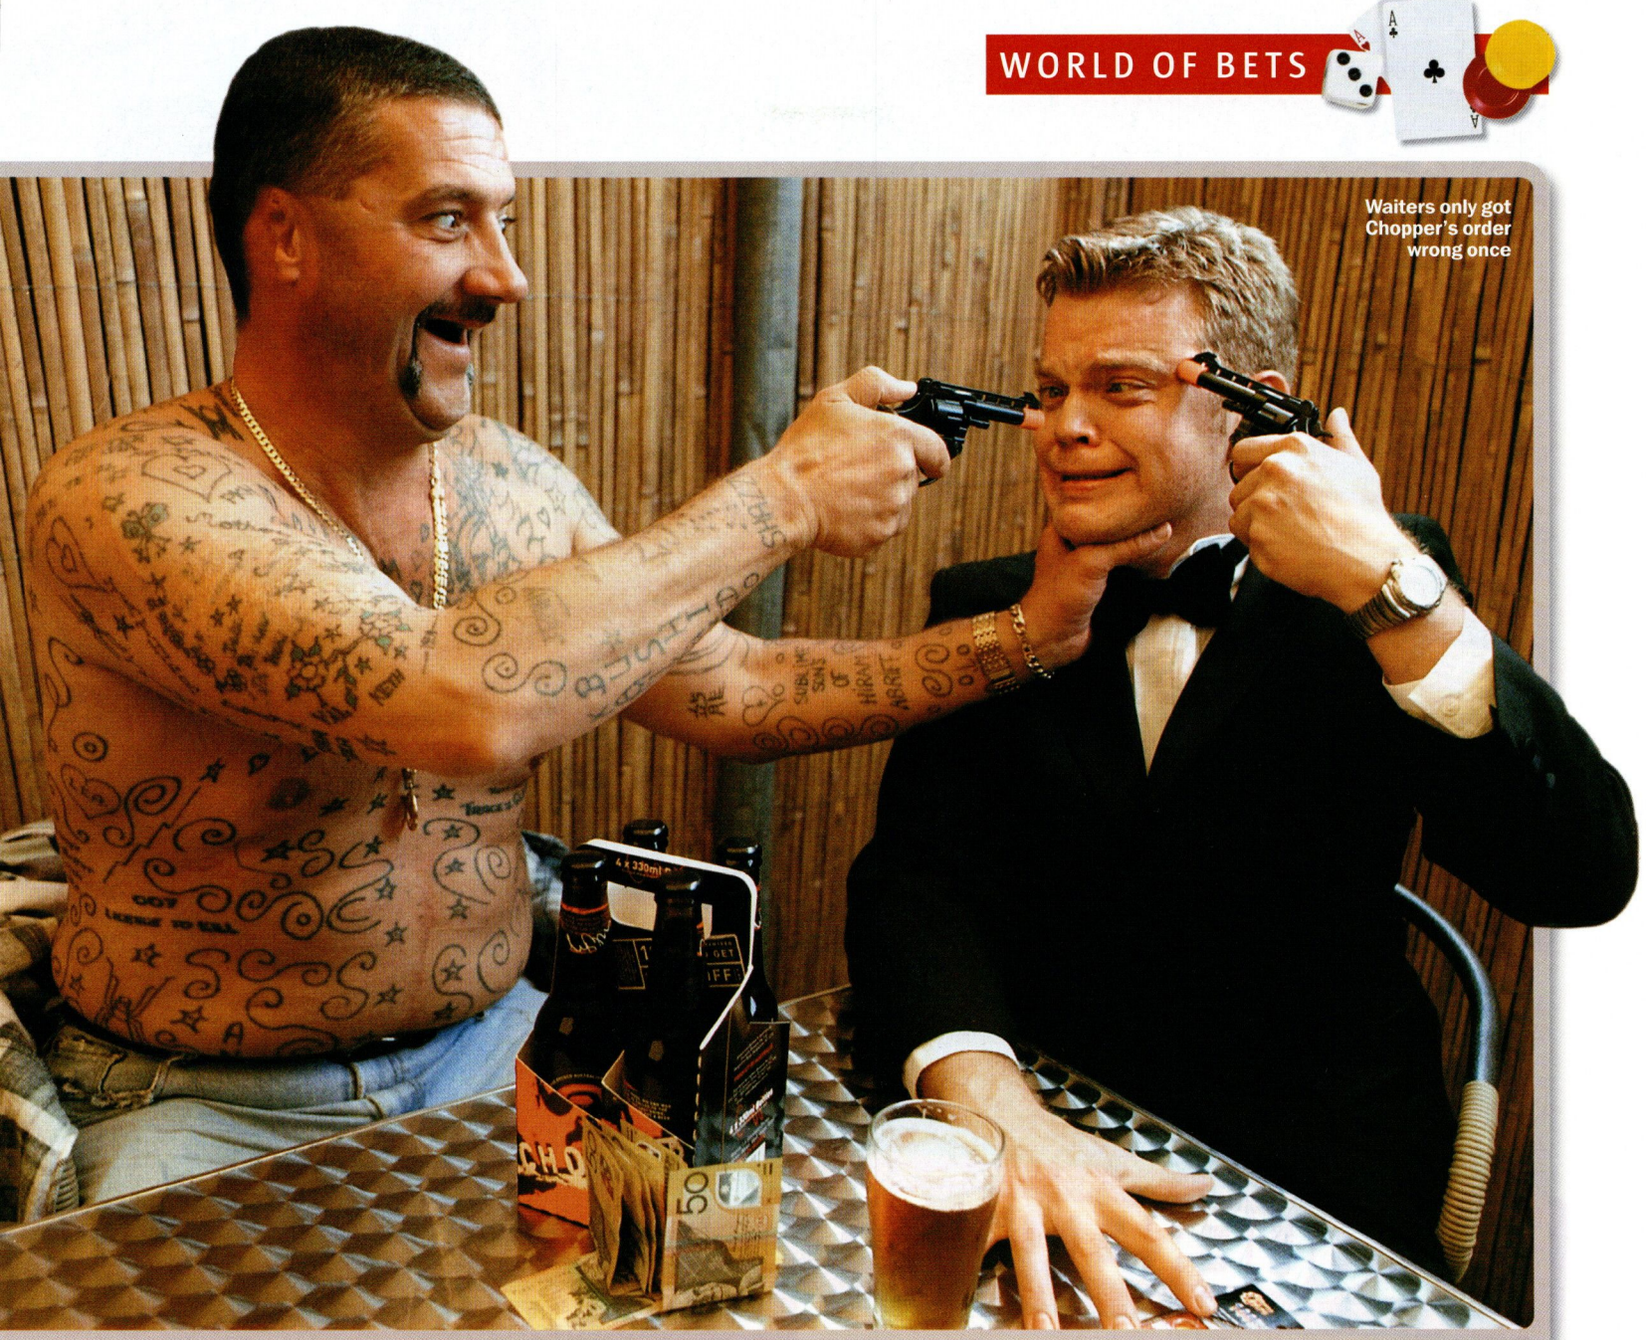
Chopper leans back on his bar stool and smiles a toothless grin. "Now that's the kinda thing you should be betting on."

Something's gone very – nay, extremely – wrong. I am, theoretically, supposed to be an international gambler: betting my way around the world's most glamorous casinos, rubbing mink-lined shoulders with the jet-set sophisticates. And yet here we are – sat in a stark Melbourne pub on a rainy Friday afternoon. Worse, staring at us is the tattooed bulk of Chopper Read: Australia's most notorious, and earless, hitman. No big deal, you might think. Uncle Chop Chop is a reformed character. Why, it's been years since the ex-underworld enforcer and contract killer saw the inside of a prison, let alone actually going to the trouble of killing somebody. Indeed, I'm thinking those same safe thoughts, right up to the point where he leans over, grabs me roughly by the neck, and puts a gun to my head.

Down Under seemed like such a good idea. Having bet £3,000 of my salary, last month's sojourn to the French Riviera – including a freezing, instantly-regretted game of nude petanque – had left us £963 down. But the Aussies would understand my increasingly reckless habit. After all, not only do they boast the most confessed gambling addicts (a staggering 82 per cent of the adult population), but better still, they lost $13.3billion (£5.6billion) last year doing it – they're almost as bad as me.

Indeed: surely, if there was one place on Earth where they'd welcome a laughably inept wager, it was the Antipodes...





Waiters only got Chopper's order wrong once

5/3/04: The Leinster Arms, Collingwood, Melbourne

THE LAST TIME I PUT A GUN TO a journalist's head," says Chopper Read, nursing a beer, "I nearly killed 'em. Thought it was empty, but the second shot went off. They shit themselves. But you won't do that, will ya?" Answer: almost certainly yes. But when you challenge Chopper Read to a bet, you won't be playing Yahtzee. No, you get what constitutes a gentleman's wager in the criminal underworld: Russian Roulette.

Predictably, Chopper's played before. "Seven or eight times, over in Footscray [a suburb of Melbourne]," he reminisces. "I'd take home $8,000 a game – a decent living..." Panicking, we phone Derren Brown, the only person we know with "roulettski" experience: "Make sure your opponent has enormous eyes," he recommends. "They're the easiest to read. Or hypnotise them with some cardboard spirals and a couple of egg whisks..." We hung up. Then Chopper phoned back: did we want him to bring his own guns along? Christ, no, you mentalist, we're bringing toy cap guns. Yes, aside from the $300 (£125) stake, all we're really risking is some mild tinnitus. "Fucking Poms," he laughs – but he loads a single plastic cap into the revolver, spins the chamber, puts it to my head... and the game is on.

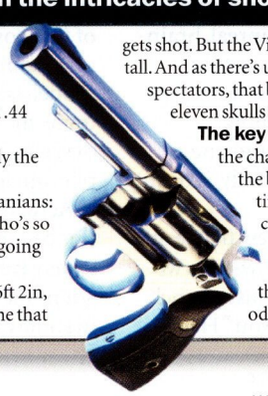
The tension is palpable. Time was if you were a gambler in Melbourne with mounting debts, this might have been the last thing you see: Chopper Read, grinning manically, pointing a gun at your head. I watch the hammer ease back... a pause, and click. Nothing. I breathe. I take the gun; I spin it once more. I place it against Chopper's temple. My knuckle tightens the trigger... thok. Nothing. Chopper grins gappily. "I'm bored," he smiles, grabs the gun, pulls the trigger – and bang.

My heart starts. Dazed, I look up: Chopper's wandered off to the bar, $300 in hand. Chuckling, he calls something back to us. But I don't hear it. For starters, my ears are still ringing. And secondly, I've shinned out of the toilet window at the back, and am now accelerating across the car park.

RUNNING TOTAL:
Minus £1,088 in plastic firearms and clean underwear.

A winner's guide

Chopper's advice on the intricacies of shooting yourself



Choose your weapon: "You need a gun that's perfectly balanced: go for the Ruger New Model Blackhawk .44 Magnum. Trust me on this."

Know your opponent: "Only the Vietnamese are mad enough gamblers to play. And the Albanians: they'll send in some junkie, who's so fucked he won't know what's going on."

Look out behind you: "I'm 6ft 2in, so if the gun goes off it's only me that gets shot. But the Vietnamese are, like, 5ft tall. And as there's usually 30-deep of spectators, that bullet's going through eleven skulls before it stops."

The key tip: "When you spin the chamber, the weight of the bullet means that 9 times out of 10 it'll come to rest at the bottom. Well, maybe 7 out of 10. But that's still pretty good odds, isn't it?"

CHEQUERED FLAG

6/3/04: The Foster's Grand Prix, Albertpark Racetrack, Melbourne

IT'S THE KIND OF TABLEAUX THAT avid petrol heads would barter their internal organs just to glimpse. Just before the first Grand Prix of 2004, we're stood in the heady maelstrom of the Jordan pit garage. Next to us, yellow mechanics poke at Nick Heidfeld's Mercedes engine; to our left, Giorgio Pantano's seat is being microscopically readjusted. And then: peeeeeeoooow... everything is drowned out by the unreal, brain-shaking jet whine of another driver taxiing onto the track. An awesome, sense-mashing experience indeed – and one where no-one, thankfully, is trying to shoot us.

Almost a shame, then, that team boss Eddie Jordan knows who we are. "FHM, eh? You're just a bunch of perverts, the lot of you." He shakes his head and points to Rachel Swaney, the gorgeous "face" of the Foster's Grand Prix, who we've sneakily followed to gain entry to the pit lane. "Even now you're not even listening to me. You're just looking at her cleavage..."

He is, of course, entirely correct. Talk about brake-horsepower and fuel-stop strategies all you want: I couldn't give less of a crap. Nope, we're stood here for the same three reasons as most of the 121,000 spectators. One, the endless barrels of free Foster's lager. Two, the astronomically high quotient of model-standard women. And three, most importantly... the hope of seeing an absolutely awesome pile-up on the first corner.

Actually, four reasons: even if this becomes the world's most expensive stock-car race, we've still got money to gamble. Time to call in some expert help...

Under starter's orders

We challenged three pit-lane kingpins to a 'tip-off'...

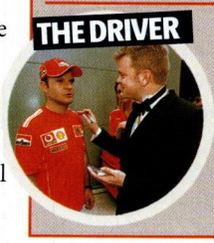
THE TEAM BOSS

EDDIE JORDAN
Finely-bearded avuncular Irishman
So who'll win? "Oh, Schumacher of course. He's the ultimate professional, a genius. You have to admire him.
Christ. Why do the rest of you even turn up? "We're doing alright: our new engine's doing well. Elsewhere? Fernando Alonso's looking fast. And the combination of Jenson Button with [Takuma] Sato might be interesting, too. And... wait, are you staring at her chest again?"

THE PUNDIT

JIM ROSENTHAL
Acutely-angled ITV petrol head
So who'll win? "Oh come on – did you see the qualifying session? It must be depressing for the other teams: Schumacher's just head and shoulders above everyone."
But surely Schumacher can't win everything, can he? "No, thank God – and I think Jenson Button's a good bet for the podium today. Show a bit of national pride, and stick your £1,000 on him.

THE DRIVER



RUBENS BARRICHELLO
Norton-faced Schmacher pursuer
Who'll win? "As he's worked hard, and getting some good times, I hope... Rubens. I think he has a good chance."
And second place? "I hope... Rubens also. Ha ha ha!"
Blimey. Anyone on the podium other than you? "Who knows? Michael, certainly. And I think Button is looking good."
A suggestion: wouldn't you win more if you entered in a monster truck? "I have to go now."

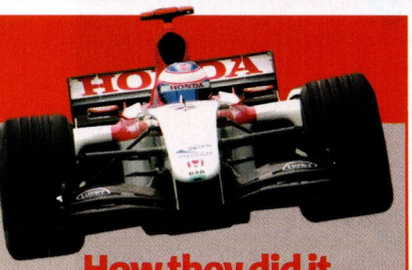
"Let me just write down how big it is"



How they did it...

Quelle surprise: no-one crashes and Schumacher romps it. Ferrari's sport-killing dominance also pushes Barrichello into his second-choice second spot, but we don't care. Following the nasal-voiced counsel of Rosenthal, we've patriotically plumped $1,500 (£625) on Brit Jenson Button. It looks wise: he's on at 13/1 to reach the podium beforehand, and then qualifies in fourth. But then reality returns, and his BAR Honda trundles home a disappointing eighth – instantly evaporating a possible $21,000 (£8,750) win. Worse, we should have listened to Eddie Jordan, who spotted surprise third place Alonso. Damn you attractive woman!

SPEAR CHUCKING

7/3/04: Tjapukai Village, near Cairns, Queensland

FOR SIMPLICITY'S SAKE, TRY TO picture Phil "The Power" Taylor, wearing a tuxedo, but the size of a garden gnome. Imagine him stumbling up to the World Championship oche, swaying as he grapples with a ludicrous 6ft-long dart. The crowd goes silent. Panting, he launches the arrows one by one. And there they land: a kangaroo... a hay bale. Oh, and thaaat'ssss the winner: The wheelchair-bound German Tourist.

Puzzled? So are we. Two days previously, we'd been adrift in the cutting-edge techno-babble of Formula One. Now, we're guests of the Aboriginal Tjapukai tribe – and suddenly we're chucking lengths of wood at a man in a grass skirt. Worse, we're reminded of the last British cultural ambassador to visit the village: the Duke Of Edinburgh who, in March 2002, greeted the elders with the words, "Do you still throw spears at each other?" And yet, unusually for Phil The Greek's expertly-tuned sense of diplomacy, there actually was an element of reality. The tribe do indeed still throw spears. Just not, until I arrive, at each other.

As I'd later proffer as contrition, it's all about technique. They had it; I was merely perilously reckless. We'd bet Derek, a surprisingly-named hunter for the Tjapukai, a flat $50 (£21) that we could beat him at galga – the game Aboriginal tribes play to perfect their hunting skills.

What we forgot, however, were the fundamentals. Firstly, don't think it's like the javelin: you're supposed to launch the spear from a wooden sling called a milay. Secondly, be sure to wipe the sweat of the 39°C heat out of your eyes. And thirdly, and most importantly, if you're unsure of the view, don't chuck sharpened timber within two feet of a German tourist in a wheelchair. Of course, once is unlucky; twice, though, is starting look like something pathological. And calamitously, my very next throw sails majestically through the air and thumps into the ground... mere inches from Derek, who's gone over to apologise.

So my accuracy is poor – so what? Be fair: I'm really getting good at this "running-the-other-way-while-they're-all-staring-in-horrified-disbelief" thing. ▷

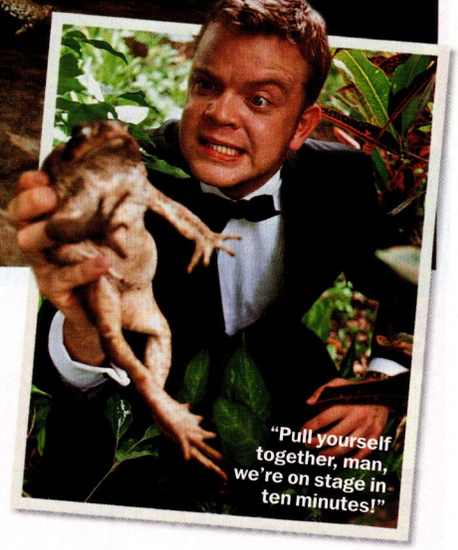
AMPHIBIOUS ASSAULT



9/3/04: The Iron Bar Hotel, Port Douglas, Queensland

EXCELLENT. WE'VE REACHED IT. Welcome to what is, without a doubt, my Lowest Ebb. I've blown £1,734 of my salary. I'm sweating clammily in a torn tuxedo. Torrential rain is slowly washing our hire car, plus luggage, down the hill. And the clincher? Now, a Cane Toad is pissing gently down my sleeve.

Imported from South America in 1935 to eat pests, old bufo marinus quickly bred into a country-wide plague himself. Only a matter of time, then, before someone suggested... racing them.

And so for the last 10 years, Clancy Grigg has held race meets at his pub, the Iron Bar Hotel. And for tonight's warty steeplechase, he's picked us a winner – a 1kg mutha we christen Big Lee, due to his vague resemblance to a certain nameless FHM staffer (Lee). I'd like to think my "jockeying" technique (puffing wildly on party blower, sympathetically inflating my neck) helped, but it's all about good, fat, over-breeding: within an hour, we're a cool $440 (£185) up.

I seemed to have found my sole, practical talent: blowing persuasively on the back of an amphibian. Was this it? Was this all I could muster? Was there any chance of making back my shortfall in our last month? Or was knee-deep in pondlife the only place I'd ever make a fortune? Time would tell – for next month the games would continue...

Caress: "And they love being tickled on the tummy – but only with long girl hair. They think they're getting lucky for the night."

Micturate: "If they piss themselves before the race, they're either losing weight, or just scared. Either way, they'll be much faster. And wetter."

Cheat: "Salt on your fingertips feels like a red hot poker up their arse. But it can kill 'em, so you risk disqualification."

Reject: "If your champion toad starts to lose weight, that's it: his career is over. Might as well take him out back in your yard and practise your golf swing on him."

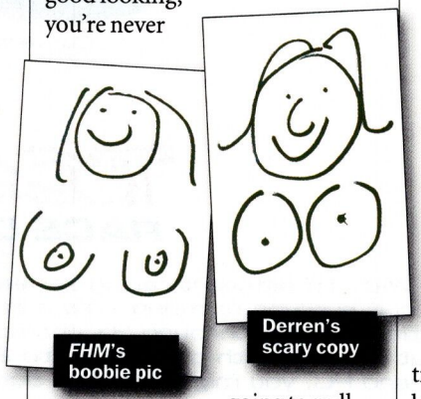
Derren Brown

The mind-controller on his gun, being in league with Lucifer and freaking us out...

You always get, "What am I going to ask you?" as a "hilarious" first question. What would you prefer to be asked?
What's the biggest dog I've ever seen?
Whoa! That was going to be our next question!
I know. It was a big, shaggy, Irish wolf hound called Kelly, owned by a friend of my mum.
You're good. Impress us again.
Well, it's almost impossible to just to do a mind-control trick. When people say, "Do this on me," I can't, because they've got expectations and I'm not in control. But, we'll try – go stand in the corner, and draw something. Don't do anything obvious – no stick men, houses, cats or dogs – everyone does them. [FHM trundles off, out of sight, to scribble a magnificent pair of boobies. We trot back; picture in back pocket.] Done?
Yup...
Sometime before the end of the interview, you'll give away what it is.
Okay. FHM hates squirrels. Ever shot any of the rascal rodents with that gun of yours?
No, I've only ever shot sandbags – nothing living, except cats. Ha! No, not really, I love animals, they're easy to hypnotise. I often go into pet shops and send everything to sleep.
People dismiss your infamous Russian roulette stunt by saying you were only firing blanks. What damage would a blank have done to your noggin?
A blank would absolutely kill you from that range. That's the one frustrating aspect about the whole thing. We tried to be as responsible as possible, so people wouldn't copy me. We were adamant to get clearly across just how dangerous it was, then this message gets out that it was safe because it was blanks. It's worrying – people might do copycat tricks.
Why did you do the stunt in Jersey, when you could have legally done it in America, with live ammo?
It would have been hugely expensive to fly my crew out there. There would have been a huge cost involved to get it out live from America, and we were a fairly small company at the time.
Are you in league with Satan?
Satan's in league with me [makes a napkin levitate]. I used to be a full-on Christian when I was younger, and a load of fellow Christians told me I was in league with the devil, which was weird. Some people can't understand magic, even if you explain exactly how you've done a trick – they'd rather believe in "forces". I think magicians see what I do as tricks, scientists see it all as psychological, and religious people see it as demons. Personally, I think it's a combination of the three.
Have you ever used your power for evil?
Yes. But I can't tell you how or when, without hurting you with my pen.
So, when you get old and senile, should we lock you in a cage, like Magneto in X-Men, to prevent you destroying the universe?
The one nice thing about what I do, is that if I do end up having seven strokes, being bound to a wheel-chair and going blind, it will only add to my image. I don't think I'll ever stop.
Are you like David Blaine and actually believe you are a wizard then?
Not at all. I know I don't take myself as seriously as Blaine. I know him and, er, I'm a big fan of him, but he's hard work. We haven't become best friends – he's very full on. But I'm very different to him, I'm not into big stunts and I don't take myself at all seriously.
What's the worst thing about being a magician?
The worst thing is when people, who are genuinely ill, write to me, thinking I can cure them. I get heart-breaking letters from people, and I am their last hope.
Can you trick females in the street to flash fun-bags?
I have never tried actually. I will on the way home and immediately text you a time of how long it takes. If my TV career goes wrong, I'll always have that service to fall back on, I suppose.
So you've actually bothered to do things legitimately, every time you've wanted to see honeys naked?
Oh, of course. Starting out, you get carried away with possible techniques. But it's a horrible shortcut to talk to a woman, or anybody. It's not very convincing and no good in the long term at all.
But what magical "shortcuts" could any ugly readers use to pull foxes?
Go to an internet chat-room and post a picture of someone much better-looking than you. It is brilliant if it works. But I think if you're ugly, there's no hope at all. Unless you're really cool and very good looking, you're never going to pull anyone of any interest.



Do another mind thingy then – which of these is a porky... we used to be John McEnroe's double's partner, we once stole Paul Daniels' golf-ball washer, or in 1999 we accidentally ate Tom Hanks' lunch?
Umm, it would just be a guess, because, I didn't make you say them. But my first thought would be the golf ball washer. Did you eat all of Tom Hanks' lunch?
It was a small lunch.
The golf ball washer then...
Bingo! How did you do that?
You probably tried to hide the lie between the other two. Otherwise I'll look for changes in the honesty pattern – when memories are real, you're accessing a different part of the brain from when you're making it up – so you'll look to a different place when you say it. Also, you were quick to move onto the third statement. That either meant; that was the lie, and you wanted to get away from it or; you were about to lie, and you wanted it over with. That's why I asked about Hanks' lunch – if you'd been hesitant, while making up an answer, I'd have said the lunch was the lie.
Finally, you're banned from most of the world's casinos. Have you ever donned a comedy disguise to sneak in?
No, I had a phase of going out and gambling, and I made about £30,000, but then stopped. You can't "mind control" a roulette wheel, it's all about counting cards which is really mundane. Though it is cool walking into a casino and having a horde of people home in on you. Umm... [starts drawing quickly]. It's going to be a person. Round, soft shapes...
Ah, our picture!
It's going to be... a girl with big tits. Yeah! A rubbish drawing of big tits, with a round face.
Spot on. How did you guess?
Reading into your child-like mind. Shameful.
I feel dirty.
So you should. FHM

Q Have you ever used your power for evil?
A Yes. But I can't tell you how or when

Sex UK!

WORDS: MATTHEW BINGHAM
PHOTOGRAPHY: LEVI BRADLEY
ILLUSTRATION: PAUL WOOTON

When we wanted to investigate the sex lives of the British, who else would we ask but FHM readers? And 25,000 of you told us...

WAY BACK IN THE Forties, a bow tie-wearing Poindexter called Dr Alfred J Kinsey conducted what at the time was the world's biggest sex survey. His team interviewed nearly 10,000 US college students on topics ranging from sexual fantasies to foreplay... but inexplicably failed to ask subjects about where in Britain do women wear the least to go out, whether they've struck a bolt through their knob or pondered who's cracked one out in the last 24 hours? Clearly the time had come for a new Sex Survey. One that found out what Britain was up to between the sheets. One that wouldn't take five years and cost hundreds of thousands of dollars, but could be slapped up on www.fhm.com overnight for tuppence.

Eat our dust, Kinsey! Stretching the very fabric of the interweb, the FHM Great British Sex Survey was completed by 25,000 of you. That's a total of 856,263 questions answered – making this the biggest UK Sex Survey ever published.

Nearly a fifth of the respondents were women, which is why the four leggy lovelies on these pages will be accompanying us through the results. Their national statistics are just a tiny sample of what we've learned – so come with us now as we lift the duvet on Britain's sexual habits... ▷

MISS ENGLAND

England: land of contradictions. In the West Country we find the nation's shyest girls; in London town, the most shag-happy – and it's the city with the highest vibrator usage. Filth!

MISS SCOTLAND

Nearly half of Scottish women have had sex within the last 24 hours, and probably with their fellas – they're the most faithful in the UK, and are least likely to have tried lesboticness.

MISS NORTHERN IRELAND

One in four Irish women say they "rarely" come in bed with their men – maybe why they're the most active self-diddlers in the UK and have more girl-on-girl sex than anywhere else.

MISS WALES

Wales has the most forward ladies in the UK: 19 out of 20 Welshmen told us they'd been chatted up by a woman. Perhaps why Welsh girls are the least likely to own a vibrator…

Don't write in, folks – nope, these aren't the actual 'Miss England', 'Miss Wales' and so on, but "sexy generic Welsh representative" sounds a bit shite

CHALLENGE 7

The 4 Musketeers™

ALLEZ! ALLEZ!

This month, the Southern Comfort Musketeers think they've got it easy. But just how will our plucky gents fare when they turn up to a Six Nations rugby match, dressed up as their literary namesakes? Find out as they pull on their gear and rock the party, to the rally cry of 'All for one and up for anything!'

It's 10.47am Saturday, November 22nd, 2003 – the nation holds its breath as England's number 10 drops the ball to his boot and kicks for goal. Of course, as you already know, it went on to sail between the posts and England, just thirty seconds later, were crowned Rugby World Cup champions. Idols were created, ashen-faced Australians wept, and the rest of us back home went rugby mad.

Since that fateful kick, the sport has never known such popularity amongst the masses. Rather, it has always been mocked as a game for portly, privately-educated chaps who love nothing more than to shuffle around a field banging into their opponents for 80 minutes, before retreating to the clubhouse for a round of lukewarm ales.

The problem with this being that, the very same self-important football fans that have ridiculed the game for years, were the ones who decided to become "fans" overnight, following that win. Naturally, this has not sat well with the true rugby supporter, and come Saturday afternoons during Six Nations' season you'll often find him grumbling into his foamy ale about not being able to see the telly, tucked away at the back of whatever hostelry you happen to be crammed into.

So, when the rugby-loving Southern Comfort Musketeers learned that our challenge for this month was to dress in the full period costume of our literary namesakes, and attend the first England Six Nations game of the season at Twickenham, we did all wonder what kind of reaction we'd receive? Would we be welcomed as the genuine supporters that indeed we actually were, or would we simply be ridiculed by mutterings of, "It's a rugby game, not a fancy dress party, fool," from the rugby faithful?

'Mouths are agape, chuckles are stifled and thigh-length boots are admired. The reaction is great, and exactly what we'd hoped for – even Victor comes over to shake our hands and slap us, rather heartily on the back'

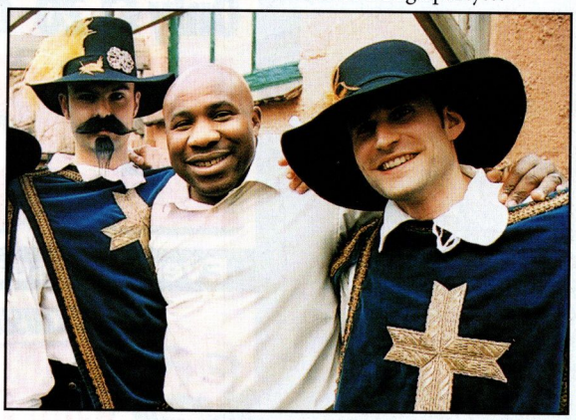
SOUTHERN COMFORT®

It was quite a quest, we all agreed. But, having proven beyond all reasonable, unreasonable and quite frankly, preposterous doubt over the last few months that the four of us are ready for any challenge – going to the rugby in full-on Musketeer regalia wouldn't be a problem, would it?

But, rocking up to a swanky pad in Twickenham just outside the stadium, where we were supposed to be getting changed, things were not at first as they seemed. In the driveway, or perhaps that should be "occupying" the driveway, was "Tiny" – a suited and booted man mountain, wielding a dangerous-looking clipboard. If your name's not down then Tiny, well, he just wasn't going to let you in…The reason? Why, this was a private bash at ex-England rugger legend, Victor Ubogu's house and we were his guests, of course!

Ushered through to a bar on the back patio by three gorgeous, featherweight

brunettes we're huddled amongst an eclectic throng of unfamiliar faces and recognisable sporting folk. We're well within reach of a bar stocked with Southern Comfort drinks, there's still an hour to kick off, and everything is looking rosy. "It doesn't get much better than this lads," grins Lewis, "I thought three days skiing was good but this, this is something else. And we don't even have to walk a glacier." The brothers Skeates (that's Matt and Geoff), stare vacantly back at the Welshman. "You do realise we've still got to put these costumes on, don't you?" asks Matt. "No problem," comes the reply, and with that he's off. The three of us chase after Lewis, but by the time we find him he's already fully kitted out. "Okay, I do feel like a bit of a plonker, especially in this hat, but it's all going to be good fun," he admits. And, with a nifty 'All for one and up for anything', we're all changed and back out at the party. Mouths are agape, chuckles are stifled and thigh-length leather boots are admired. The reaction is great, and exactly what we'd hoped for – even Victor comes over to shake our hands and slap us, rather heartily, on the back. Indeed, it's the same on the way to the game. Both sets of fans alike come up to us, wishing us well and generally enquiring as to why the four of us are dressed as Frenchmen at an England vs Ireland game. Our reply is a swift blow to the chest with our rubbery, plastic swords, a big grin and the explanation that we, are the four Southern Comfort Musketeers!



Once in the ground the atmosphere is electric. It's England's first home game since winning the World Cup and after 22 straight wins at Fortress Twickenham, an Irish defeat is expected to be the order of the day. Unfortunately, the wily Paddy's have other ideas and pull off an incredible against-the-odds win. "You guys didn't deserve that," whispers the Aussie sat next to me – something I never thought I'd hear. Still, we've lost, and we're all feeling rather glum.

"Cheer up lads!" bellows a wax jacket-sporting old codger, smirking at our outfits, as we leave the ground. "He's right, you know," says Geoff, "we had to lose sometime but hey, we're here to enjoy ourselves. 'All for one', and let's head back to Victor's!" That lifts our mood, and we're soon back on the patio with a cheery round of Southern Comfort drinks, and looking forward to the next game. Maybe we'll be lucky enough to whoop it up at another lady-laden Victor Ubogu party...

Now do it yourself

Rugby World Cup caught your attention? Fancy watching the game live, rather than from the comfort of a cosy armchair? Then get yourself along to your local rugby club for some live, grandstand action. For more information try contacting the Rugby Football Union at their HQ in London on 020 8892 2000, or via your PC at www.rfu.com. For international matches you can also try contacting the RFU, though you'll find bagging yourself a ticket nigh on impossible as the vast majority are distributed through the clubs, to their members. Alternatively you can sign up to a specially organised hospitality event that also guarantees you entry to the game. We mixed it up with stars of the game, both past and present at an event organised by the charming Victor Ubogu. For more information on the events that he organises you can call (08718 715300), or check online at www.vultd.co.uk

Win a VIP trip to the rugby...

Tried everything, including selling your own granny, and still never managed to get tickets to the rugby? Then you're in luck! Southern Comfort would like to send you and three pals to Twickenham for the London Sevens in June. As well as great tickets to the match your VIP hospitality package will also include refreshments on arrival, a four course nosh-up, £200 spending money and one night's accommodation in London. To be in with a chance of winning, simply get yourself along to www.fhm.com/southern-comfort, and fill in the form. Your details will be entered into the draw in merely a few seconds – it really is that easy!

Terms and conditions apply. UK residents aged 18 or over only. Only one entry per person. Closing date is May 28 2004. Good Luck!

THE FATTTEST TWINS IN THE WORLD
Some obese people hide behind net curtains and double-locked doors; others court hurtful remarks by hanging around the pie aisle of Tesco. Few fatties, however, have been as proud of their city-sized bellies as North Carolina twins Benny and Billy McGuire - the twins weighed 200 pounds (14 stone) each by the age of 10, and had topped 600 pounds (42 stone) when they finished high school. They kept on chowing until they peaked in adulthood at 814 (58 stone) and 784 pounds (56 stone) respectively. With limited career options, the pair became wrestlers, and got a hoot out of the crowd by literally squashing their opponents. Billy died aged 32 in 1979, with Benny joining him in a similarly crater-like grave in 2001.

PERFECT!

Abi Titmuss stood by her accused man, performed in threesomes while her fella filmed it – and now she's happily taken all her clothes off for FHM! As she prepares to launch her own showbiz career, we salute our favourite new lady…

WORDS: DOMINIC SMITH
PHOTOGRAPHY: MAN

FEW WOMEN HAVE undergone as startling a public transformation as Abi Titmuss. While ex-boyfriend John Leslie fought rape allegations (all charges were subsequently dropped), Abi, then a full-time nurse, was portrayed as the quiet girlfriend, loyally standing by her man. Then ex-basketball pro Jason Blayde (no, we'd never heard of him either) sold his story of drug-fuelled, girlfriend-swapping orgies and her reputation was transformed overnight. Stung by the revelations, Abi then sold the News Of The World her side of the story, owning up to a gloriously racy love life that included saucy home videos and cavorting with other ladies to please her man. What a woman!

And then, as Leslie's career appeared to go into freefall, Abi's took off. First there was a brief, but much publicised, promotional stint for soft-porn channel Television X, then the TV and theatre scripts started to arrive, and now she's in the process of filming her very own Channel 4 documentary What Abi Did Next. Throw in the tabloids' increasing interest in both her and her ever more revealing outfits, and it was clearly time FHM got on the blower to secure her first ever men's magazine shoot.

What we didn't expect was the sheer sauciness of the pictures. "Yeah, I got quite excited," laughs Abi. "I got as horny as hell doing it. I'm a bit of an exhibitionist so I loved it." With her nurse's uniform now hung up for good, Abi is emerging from the shadows of her randy, and unnaturally tall, ex and launching her own showbiz career. And, judging by the confident, flirtatious girl that FHM encounters she's loving every minute of it...

Abi and Leslie face their trial by media

'Of course I want to be rich and famous, who wouldn't?'

You've gone from being a full-time nurse to a tabloid favourite. Is it weird being recognised in public?
It is, but I'm kind of used to it now. It's been a baptism of fire, though. But the positives I'm now getting out of it I absolutely love. Of course I want to be rich and famous, who wouldn't?

How hard was it to confess all to the News Of The World?
Doing that interview was the most difficult thing I've had to do in my life. The most difficult thing was that the people interviewing me had seen pictures of me, in a hotel room with John, in various poses. But intimate, explicit, private pictures that boyfriends take of their girlfriends. They'd poured over them and I had to talk about them in detail and I felt absolutely degraded and violated. ▷

Getty Images. Bikini by Pink Piranha (020 7267 1100)

So was it really worth doing it?
Yes, because I could not let the person that sold the story be the last thing on record about me. People just would have remembered the word orgy and me, so I had to do something about it. Also I wanted to take some stick off John, they were saying he was depraved and I wanted to say I was a willing participant, so it's not fair that he should take all the stick.

Are you two still an item?
I don't want to say. I'm not here to talk about John. I know you have to ask, but I'm not going to talk about that, it's not fair on John.

Fair enough. How did your mum react to the News Of The World revelations?
She was shocked and upset, because it seemed that everything was over for me. But my mum's really cool. I've never been an angel, so anything I do is never that much of a shock to her.

Did she ask if you'd really done all those things?
A little bit, yes. And I told her the truth. I had to either hide in Australia or tell the truth and be really honest. And I am a racy blonde bird at times!

Amen to that. Are you worried about your home videos appearing on the net?
No, because the pictures that were stolen were stills that had been downloaded from videos onto a memory stick, so there is no video. There are plenty of videos in the drawer at home, but that's where they're staying!

So how many videos would you say you've you got?
Are you talking personal? A few, but let's stop there. ▷

'It is a distracting chest, but the puppies don't come out that often'

Okay. Did the police come after you about the claims that you bought cocaine?

I don't want to talk about that, but suffice to say there were no repercussions.

Were you annoyed when you found out you'd been sacked from your reporting job on Richard And Judy?

They didn't sack me, they just distanced themselves from me. I never had a contract, so they just said we can't use you at the moment, which I understood. But before my story came out there was just one story and on the back of his [Jason Blayde's] version it was like, "We can't use you," so I was a bit disappointed.

Did Television X really pay you £150,000 for promoting their spring schedule?

No, but it was enough. It was more than a nurse's wage! I kept my clothes on at all times and just did a few links to camera and that was it. But I have no problem about promoting a bit of sex. There's nothing wrong with a bit of porn, I'm all for that.

Good for you. Do men always talk to your breasts?

He says with his eyes staring me in the eye, ha ha! I think men tend to go over the top to avoid doing it, but even women stare at my breasts when I wear a low-cut top. Sometimes friends say, "For God's sake Abi, would you cover them up a bit!" It is a distracting chest, but the puppies don't come out that often, ha ha!

Sequinned bikini stylist's own

They certainly did – but you're special.

Thank you. You seemed to enjoy posing for the shoot though...

Yeah, it's a sexy thing to do. I love posing, because I hate being the centre of attention, ha ha! I'm such a prude. I bought the stockings off the stylist afterwards. If they hadn't have put me in stockings I was going to ask for them, because they're my favourite piece of underwear.

Were you surprised to feature in FHM's 100 Sexiest list?

Yeah, I was over the moon about that. Really, really chuffed. But how many times could my mother vote? Ha ha!

You used to be a nurse – do you ever wear your uniform in bed?

Yes, one of the very few perks of being a nurse is that you get the uniform and I think most nurses have done that. All of my nurse friends were pretty rampant; it's work hard, play hard!

What's your wildest nursing story?

When I was at university the majority of the students were women and by the end of the three years I'd say half of them had experimented with their feminine side. Everyone was snogging everyone else.

Marvellous. Did that include you?

No, I was a late developer in that area. But it's fun – kissing girls is lovely. You don't get stubble rash for a start. But I'm definitely a man's woman, I've never kissed a girl on my own, it's always for a boyfriend. That's the fun of it. I think I was born to perform and it turns me on if it turns him on.

Fantastic! What's been the sexiest experience of your life?

Meeting you. ▷

'I knew someone was secretly watching me once – that was sexy'

Don't take the piss!
No, I can't tell you, it's too rude. I'd love to tell you, and you'd absolutely love it, but it's too rude.

Give us a clue...
No, I can't. It's just too rude. I've done lots of sexy things, but I couldn't pick one. Like everyone knows I've had threesomes of various kinds, ha ha! And I knew someone was secretly watching me once and that was very sexy.

But would you recommend threesomes?
Yes, as long as everyone's happy. They're great as long as you're not pressured and you're both secure in your relationship. But I've never done swapping round sexual partners, it's just me having a bit of fun and performing for a guy. It's not about him having sex with the girl, it's about me and the girl. I'm giving him enough – he's not getting that as well ha ha!

You're planning your dream orgy – which five people would you invite?
Right... I'd have Robbie Williams, Jude Law, the singer from the Red Hot Chili Peppers (Anthony Kiedis). Then I'd go for Britney Spears and Jenna Jameson, because she sounds like fun.

Blimey! What's your favourite sex tip?
I think watching a bit of porn is great for lighting the spark again. And for a man to a woman – just make her feel really sexy. Be really comforting and then call her a bitch, ha ha!

Saucy home videos, cavorting naked with other ladies... are you the perfect girlfriend?
Well, I'm very loyal, I want to support myself and do my own thing, and I'm up for anything... I think I probably am, yes. FHM

STYLE IT UP!

Thanks to Garnier Fructis Style, a lucky bunch of happy folk will be tootling off to Newquay to the Ripcurl Boardmasters Surf Festival, where they'll learn to skate, surf, DJ and make their hair pass the lady muster. Read on, gnarly fella...

Remember school? Rubbish, huh! Years of prison-like incarceration where losers with all the cool factor of your dad (usually sporting a bird's nest of a beard) stood in front of a blackboard and pointlessly tried to convince you that stuff like addin' and spellin' would be of any earthly use to you in the real world. Yeah, right.

Now, if that tweed jacket-wearing doofus had spent your valuable time schooling you on skateboarding, surfing and DJing that would be something worth studying. Luckily, Garnier Fructis Style has got that area of your education covered, with the Garnier Fructis Style Trials competition. Running from August 2 to 8, Garnier Fructis Style will be inviting 12 individuals down to a big old house in Newquay for a week of debauchery at the Ripcurl Boardmasters Surf Festival.

As well as five days of helicopter rides, mountain boarding and partying on offer, experts will be teaching the lucky winners the inside beefs of their chosen pastimes. So pro surfers from Ripcurl, skaters from Vans and XFM DJs will be holding masterclasses, while Garnier Fructis Style – with its Surf Hair mattifying clay – will be sorting your barnet. How? Well, a walnut-sized amount of this goo: designed for styling short, to mid-length hair, rubs in a treat to create that surfer-style, tousled matt look. So even if you're not in a skintight wetsuit, clinging onto a surf board, the ladies will be clocking your surf skills, and with the expert tuition on offer who knows, maybe you could become a pro for real...

COMPETITION!

So how do do I stand a chance of winning this fine competition?" you ask. To enter the Garnier Fructis Style Trials, all you need to do is fire up the interweb and log on to: www.styletrials.com, because that's where all the details live.

Just think, a few, deft clicks of the mouse and you could join 11 other hopefuls and spend a week surfing/skating/DJing and partying with the pros at the Ripcurl Boardmasters Surf Festival...

The paparazzo

Stuart Morton hides in bushes and photographs celebrities for the Big Pictures agency...

What's your best ever shot?
Probably Posh and Becks in December 2002. I had a tip-off they were in Barbados, which is almost my backyard now, but none of my contacts knew a thing. So I did about four miles of beach walking. Outside one beach-front mansion there was a guy who looked really out of place, so I put down my towel 200 yards away and watched. He put an earpiece in and started talking. I'd never seen security before at this house so, as it was the only lead I had, I sat there for five days. On the last day, the doors opened and David Beckham and the whole troupe walked down the beach. I was shooting pictures for my life, hiding behind a stall, when Beckham clocked me – but he put his thumbs up to say it was okay. Adrenalin was flying through my body. I sold the pictures within 35 minutes of shooting them – eight pages in OK! magazine.

What's the Holy Grail of snaps – the pic you could retire on?
Prince William with a girl is what we call the hubba-hubba picture; that would be worth £1 million. The pictures of him shopping last year sold in Europe alone for £250,000.

How close to a kicking have you come in pursuit of a snap?
Mariah Carey's security chased me, but I was on a moped and they were running. And a TV presenter's husband threatened to put my camera where the sun doesn't shine. The worst case was when I saw a photographer get badly beaten up in France by a guy protecting Bruce Willis. We were waiting for Willis to come off the golf-course and sit on the beach, but one French guy was running round like a giddy schoolkid and the security guard clocked him. The photographer became quite aggressive, so the security bloke floored him then kicked him so hard his calf split open. He was screaming and there was blood all over his leg. It was awful. I packed up my gear and walked.

Where's the strangest place you've hidden to get an exclusive?
I've shot pictures out of a sewer pipe – of celebrities at Dave Stewart's wedding in the south of France. They were on a decking pontoon that goes out from the beach. Two of us hid in this outflow pipe underneath the next pontoon along, chest high in water, for about five hours. I also shot pictures from the boot of a car in the Sahara in September. We busted into a film set – Alexander The Great with Colin Farrell. Sometimes, you need to provoke a reaction to get a good picture, so I opened the boot and stood there shooting until Farrell pointed at me – lovely picture on horseback, thank you very much, let's get the hell out. I had to stay in the boot while we were chased across the desert at 50mph by the Moroccan army. My arse was black and blue.

Ever wear a disguise?
I've disguised myself as a bush; that was in Ireland on the set of King Arthur with Keira Knightley. I had to sneak in before the sun came up and stand up to my knees in a bog until it got dark – in wind and rain. I stuck branches on my legs and arms with elastic bands.

What might an average pap hope to bank in a year?
Probably £30,000, plus all-expenses-paid travel and equipment. Sales from the Posh and Becks pics have probably totalled between £75,000 and £100,000, but I'm paid a salary by Big Pictures. I'm also a partner in the business, so the better the company does, the better I do.

Obviously, other paps are on the scent, too. How do you stay ahead of the pack?
Research, and getting to know people who know – airline and hotel staff, taxi drivers. You have to pay out a few quid but these guys aren't earning a lot so they'll happily tell you things. Finding the movie in Morocco was typical paparazzi work. We sat in the hotel bar with set-builders and people like that. You buy them beers and they can't wait to talk. So we found out where they were filming and did a recce at this set in the desert. We saw that all the hire cars were the same model and had the same security pass taped on them. We went back to the hotel that night, made our own passes and hired exactly the same type of vehicle. We joined the convoy in the morning and went straight in.

And how intense is paparazzi rivalry?
Extremely. Someone drove me and a colleague off the road. I've had my car done over. I've had the apartment I was staying in ransacked. I've had immigration and police called on me.

Nice! Have you missed any sure-fire pension pics?
Oh Christ, two heart-rending ones. One day I was in a Caribbean airport and Hugh Grant walked in. The check-in desk faced me and this huge security lady opened his suitcase and picked up a pair – I joke not – of red and white polka-dot boxer shorts. He was there cringing and I could see the picture – but my camera was in the car. I was gutted. The other one concerned a male singer in his early sixties, with his boyfriend, an air-steward, kissing and cuddling on a beach. I missed it by five minutes. A friend was there and phoned me, so I hammered it up the road but they'd walked off by then. I thought I'd missed a retirement picture, but a former editor of The Sun told me it wouldn't be published because he was a "bastion of British society" and people wouldn't buy a paper that blew that myth away. So that was some relief.

What exactly is your definition of privacy?
I'll shoot pictures of people in a hotel or even on private beaches. I won't shoot pictures in people's back gardens or in their houses. I've seen pictures of Janet Jackson completely starkers in her back garden in LA. But they're unpublishable because of obscenity laws and because of invasion of privacy.

How many photos in the tabloids aren't genuinely candid at all, but are set up by publicists?
A lot of that goes on. Of my work, 70 to 80 per cent is real paparazzi work and the rest is tip-offs from insiders. Sandy Lane beach in Barbados, for example, can be like a catwalk. Everyone goes down there knowing they're going to be photographed. I've had Jeremy Clarkson walk up and say, "If you come back tomorrow, I'll do a set of pictures and then you promise to leave me alone. Deal?" Yes, because we get an exclusive set of pictures to sell.

Have you any great celebrity snaps that'd be good for FHM's Who the Hell Are You? section?
When I was shooting pictures of Louise Redknapp in Barbados, at the same time, I had a separate job of shooting pictures of Martin O'Neill, the football manager. But you couldn't do a picture of her without getting him swimming in the background. It was ridiculous.

Finally, what would you do if faced with a scene in which Prince Charles was being noshed off in the foreground... and an old lady was being violently mugged behind him?
Christ, this could make me out to be a real bastard... Er... I know! I'd get a picture in the bag then I'd shout at Prince Charles, "Look at that woman getting mugged over there!", then take the pictures of him tackling a mugger. Two sets of pictures out of one. FHM

Nothing says you care about your clobber more than wearing white. You're obviously a man who's a stranger to public transport, owns a state-of-the-art washing machine and holidays in places like Ko Lanta, a beautiful island off the coast of Thailand. Which, incidentally, is where we shot our white tailoring story this month, featuring labels like Nicole Farhi and Prada.

We've also hand-picked the best summer Ts, and show the braver souls among you how to achieve the summer's key trend: the cowboy look!

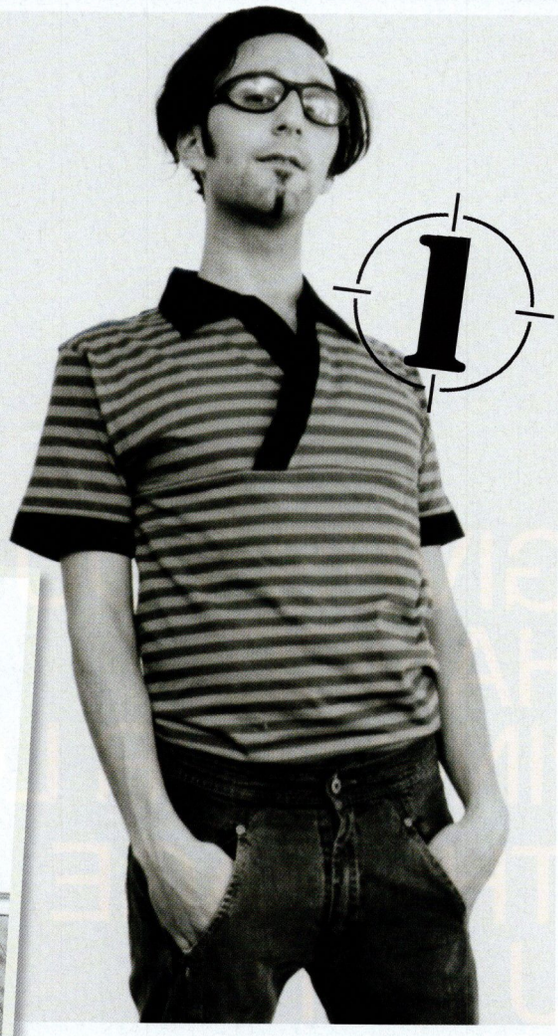
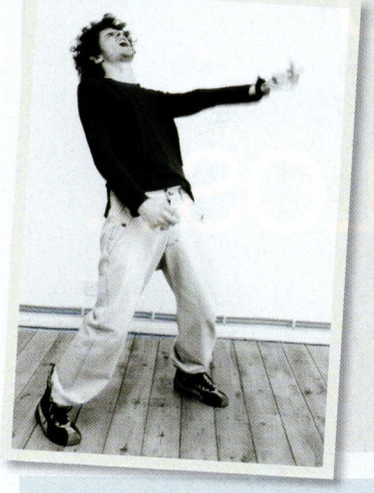
FHM's faultlessly-tailored spy brings you the fashion world skinnie

Punk'd!

Having cut his teeth for designers such as Katherine Hamnett and Maharishi and High Street store Reiss, Michael Keller has turned out his own range, best described as classic with a punk twist. Jeans come in crazy colours, while his T-shirts look like they've been attacked by marauding toddlers holding pieces of chalk. One to watch. www.michaelkeller.co.uk

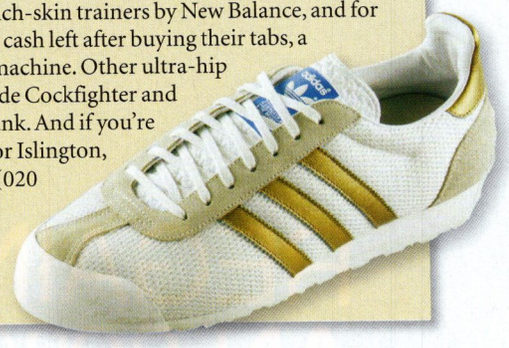




ACCESSORY ALERT!

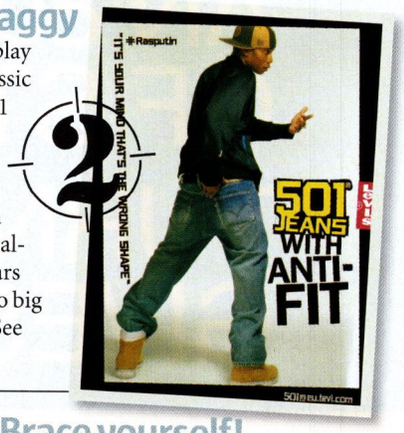
Lucky bag

This month we've pulled out all the stops to bring you not just one accessory but a boxful of sartorial extras, thanks to London menswear superstore Microzine and their three floors of goodies. Current FHM favourites include fencing shoes by Adidas (right here, below), ostrich-skin trainers by New Balance, and for anyone with cash left after buying their tabs, a vintage fag machine. Other ultra-hip names include Cockfighter and Buddhist Punk. And if you're not handy for Islington, buy online. (020 7704 6667 or www.microzine.co.uk)



It's all gone baggy

Levi's have decided to play around with design classic the 501. The result, "501 jeans with Anti-Fit", is a looser cut than before, owing much to the original 501s which first covered miners' coal-blackened arses 130 years ago. Buy yours a size too big for true skater appeal. See www.levi.com

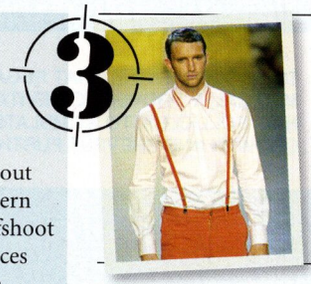


INVESTMENT OF THE MONTH

123 go!

"Diffusion" ranges – affordable clobber from top designers – can all too often veer into daft printed-logo mayhem.

But not 123 by YMC (You Must Create). This cult-like UK label normally puts out collections of modern basics, but new offshoot 123 adapts key pieces from the main-line collection in basic fabrics and a variety of colours – at a reasonably affordable price. (020 7249 0700)



Brace yourself!

Add a touch of Mod to your wardrobe with a pair of braces. Paraded down the catwalks of Pringle, Romeo Gigli and Moschino, these humble elastic straps are staging a comeback. Be brave!

NY appeal

New York-based fashion house Cloak's third season has hit, and it combines catwalk appeal with "city survival", whatever that might mean – apparently a lot of leather and rock-inspired T-shirts in muted, low-key colours like black, white and clay. We like the quirky attention to detail. Details at www.cloakdesign.com

Director's Cut

Fashion Director Gary Kingsnorth picks June's best clobber

1 Levi's loose fit 501 jeans £60

Levi's most famous sons have undergone a revamp – so hide that arse in style. (01604 599752)

2 Gap vest £14.50

Show off your tan in Gap's "wifebeater". This is the summer's key colour, so you won't stand out like a ripe lemon on the beach. (08004 27789)

3 Junghans 'Apollo' watch £379

Fancy German radio-equipped innards pick up the Greenwich signal for timekeeping accuracy. Looks great, too. (08707 520880)

4 Benetton jacket £95

Leather jackets? Hot, heavy things. But not if you're wearing Benetton's cool cotton biker top. Just don't fall off a motorcycle wearing one – then you'll feel the difference. (020 7389 8124)

5 Fabris Lane sunglasses £28

High-quality, spot-on sunnies from an Italian label – at a quarter of the price of most designer shades. (020 8974 1642)

Photography: Robert Decelis

6 Jil Sander sandals

£150

They're a lot of dosh, but these beauties will last more than a single summer, they're dead comfy and being leather, washable too. (020 7758 1000)

7 Evisu cycling helmet £365

Yes, that's denim. In possibly the most bizarre ever fashion "brand extension", the Evisu logo pops up on safetywear. (020 7287 6767)

8 H&M suit

£129

No need to shell out a shedload of cash if you're just an occasional suit wearer – H&M's budget pinstripe hits all the right tailoring buttons, and for peanuts. (020 7323 2211)

9 Energie cowboy shirt £65

Cowboy, the gurus tell us, is the hot new look. But you'll need to be a real Western fan to tuck this all-too-authentic looking shirt into your chaps. Yeehaa! (08707 516040)

10 Autograph at Marks & Spencer polo top £35

M&S's top-end in-house brand is behind this contrast styled, nicely cut knit polo. Can't go wrong with Markses, can you? (0845 3021234)

In our April issue, we foolishly gave all sorts of wrong information about Adidas Predator Pulse boots. They're actually £120, and the stockists number is 08702 404204. Sorry!

Saddle up!

You wanna be a cowboy? Well grab your stetson, butch, because the Wild West is the key look at the moment. No, really...

THE EVIDENCE IS inescapable: one of the least likely fashion trends for years is gaining critical mass. Yes, this summer we're going to dress up like cowboys. In Hollywoodland, the stars are already stepping out in bootcut jeans and shirts with leather shoulder patches.

On the catwalk, the likes of Gucci, Prada, Calvin Klein and Nicole Farhi have been busy hanging gingham and bootlace ties off the models. And now the High Street has caught on: authentic-cut jeans, cow's head belts and shirts with poppers are available now. Even in Rhyl.

To go the whole hog, slip on a pair of beaten up cowboy boots – look in charity shops or car-boot sales for line dancers' rejects and save yourself a packet. Now draw, pardner!

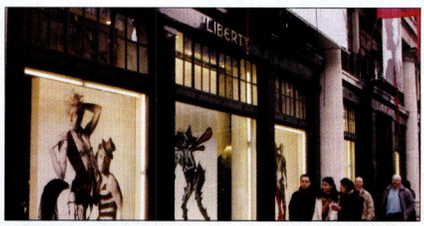
LONDON (PART 1)



LIBERTY
210-220 Regent Street, London, W1B 5AH (020 7734 1234)
Brands: Vivienne Westwood, Resistance, Costume National, Duffer, Vicri, APC
The store for the fashion aficionado – hard to get Japanese labels with lots of "intelligent" design. A joy to shop because you'll always find something to catch your attention.

MICROZINE
66-67 Colebrooke Row, Islington, London, N1 8AB (020 7704 6667)
Brands: Oliver Spencer, Red Dot, Umbro-Contrast, Dunhill, G-Star, Gieves 1 Savile Row
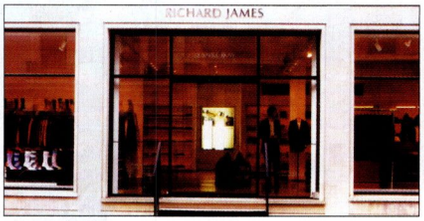
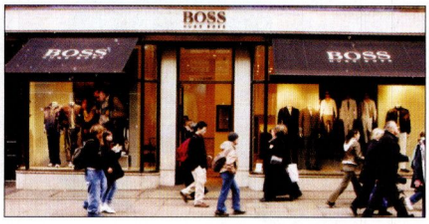
So trendy it could hurt. Allegedly like a magazine – picking out the best and the newest: showing clothes next to furniture, books and CDs next to shoes – but the sales assistants wear too many clothes. Definitely worth a visit.



RICHARD JAMES
29 Saville Row, London, W1S 2PY (020 7434 0605)
If you want to shop on Savile Row, this is the place to go. Old school skills blend with modern style – the suits are quality and the shirts are great. It costs a bomb, but the staff are so friendly you won't even notice – much.



HUGO BOSS
184 Regent Street, London, W1B 5TL (020 7734 7919)
Knowledgeable staff selling great suits in a very relaxed environment. If you want to spend 400 notes or more on a suit then this is the place to come. Not only will you look good but you'll feel good about it too. Some great casualwear around as well.

TED BAKER
9 Floral Street, London, WC2E 9HW (020 7836 7808)
Full Ted Baker range
The full Ted works – from suits and quirky business shirts downstairs to the full Ted range on the ground floor. Lots of fun details in store as well as the usual Ted staff enthusiasm. Were else would you want to get your "Bed Takers".

DUFFER OF ST GEORGE
34 Shorts Gardens, London, WC2H 9AP (020 7836 3722)
Brands: Duffer, Vicri, Oeuf, Joe Casely Heyford, Evisu, Rogan, YMC
Still one of the hippest, coolest places to shop in London. An eclectic brand mix with formal on one side of the road and the main store full of great casualwear, ideal for dressing in the urban jungle.

SIZE?
33-34 Carnaby Street, London, W1F 7DW (020 7287 4016)
Brands: G-Star, Seal Kay, Can't Skate, One True Saxon, Sabotage, Angry, Adidas, Y3
Fantastic trainer selection backed by a basement full of seriously hip labels.

country's top gentleman's outfitters (or, shops, if you prefer). Go forth and spend, young man!

URBAN OUTFITTERS
Seven Dials Warehouse, 42-56 Earlham Street, London, WC2H 9LJ (020 7759 6390)
Brands: Junk De Luxe, Lee Jeans, Dockers, One True Saxon, Penguin
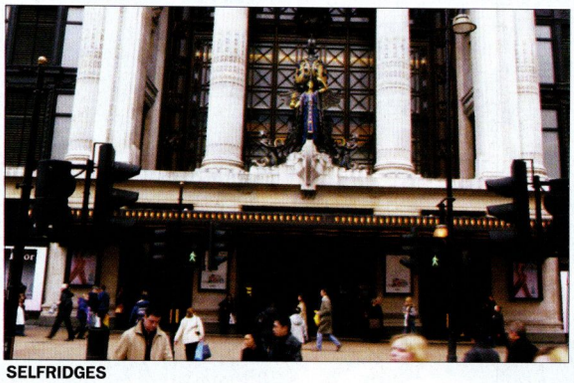
Strong selection of brands mixed with a recycled/ vintage range that includes customised suit jackets and old combat jackets. Helpful and knowledgeable staff despite the frenetic pace of the store – worth checking out.



SELFRIDGES
400 Oxford Street, London, W1A 2LR (08708 377377)
Brands: Duffer, Prada, Hugo Boss, G-Star, Paul Smith, Polo Ralph Lauren
Brand heaven. From Thomas Pink downstairs in the shirt department, up through Armani and Ozwald Boateng and on past Hackett, Stone Island, to Paul Smith, Miu Miu and Evisu. Oh, and there's loads of jeans, Ts and trainers as well.

BRITISH BRAWN
Ford Fiesta RS

Pigeonhole one of Ford's grey-suited engineers and they'll mumble something about the Fiesta RS being "just a concept". But don't let their mumbo-jumbo fool you, this baby will be thundering its way onto Ford forecourts by the end of next year, complete with a price-tag of just £16k. Rippling wheel arches hide 18in alloys and there's a tailgate spoiler to create all-important downforce. There's a tuned 2.0-litre motor pumping out almost 200bhp – so it should crack 130mph and munch its way from 0 to 60mph in under seven seconds.

RALLY THOROUGHBRED
Mitsubishi Colt Evo

Mitsubishi was going to turn the Colt hatchback into a tarmac-shredding World Rally Car, until they realised that their lovely new puppy was too small for the pesky rallying regulations. So the crazy Jap boffins have started work on an Evo road car based on the CZ3 concept, which could well be in showrooms as early as 2006 and cost as little as £23,000. The Evo's 2-litre turbo engine should kick out at least 300bhp, crack the 0 to 60mph sprint in a Ferrari-pasting 4.5 seconds and reach at least 150 mph. Please, Mitsubishi, build this car!

STOCKS MAY NOT LAST
Citroën C2 GT

When Citroën killed off the Saxo VTR in 2003, the nation's boy racers wept silently in their beds. Cheap, insurable and easily dicked around with, the Saxo was worshipped by those who like to "modify" their motors. But out of the ashes has come a hot new hatch: the C2 GT. The 110bhp, 1.6-litre engine doesn't sound promising, and it might not be girlfriend-scaringly rapid – 0 to 60mph takes 9.5 seconds – but it's a hoot to drive and costs a paltry £10,495. But you'll need to hurry – the production run's limited to 2,250.

FRENCH FRIED
Megane Renaultsport

At £19,500 in three-door or £20,000 in five-door guise, this continental chariot might not be cheap, but it's a genuinely hot hatch. That's because in less time than it takes to stutter out the frankly unpronounceable name, the Megane will have propelled you to 62mph: 6.5 seconds, to be precise, with the motor's speedo topping out at 147mph.

Things we drove this month!

Be they old, new, fast or slow. Or a three-wheeler. We'll drive them all and tell it like it is!

Mini Cooper S

They say: Has the head turning qualities missing in the small car market.
We say: BMW have squeezed 163bhp out of a 1.6l engine – which means you can throw it around hairpins at 60mph scream-free.
Best bit: Watching bunnies explode at a 120mph impact.
Expect to pay: £14,605 OTR

Mazda RX-8 (High power)

They say: Drive the revolution.
We say: This "high power" version of the standard RX-8 means business – 231bhp, 146mph top end and 0 to 60 in just 6.4secs... from a 1.3-litre!
Best bit: The price – just two grand more than standard spec.
Expect to pay: £22,100 OTR
Stockists: www.mazda.co.uk

Seat Leon Cupra R 225

They say: The answer to your prayers.
We say: The 1.8-litre turbo-charged engine's a belter: 150mph on the limit and 0 to 60 in under seven seconds. A sound bet on a budget.
Best bit: Gunning it – this'll keep up with the best of them.
Expect to pay: £18,000 OTR

DO YOU LIKE IT WET OR DRY?

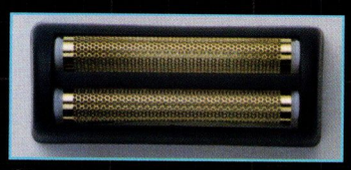
Have the best of both with the new Scherna Sensitive.

Our research shows that shaving the traditional wet or dry way can cause problems for people with sensitive skin.

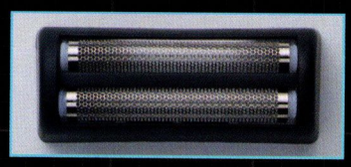
That's why we designed a revolutionary new shaving system to give you the great, fresh feeling you get from foam and water, without the skin irritation or the nicks.

Using foam lets the Scherna Sensitive's foils glide effortlessly through stubble leaving you fresh, clean and smooth.

Add this to your list of things to enjoy in the shower.



Shave. Double sensitive foil system. Shave dry or wet with foam.



Shave. Double foil system. Shave dry or wet with foam.

Trim. Narrow, barber-style head with grades 1-4 for precision cutting and blending.

Clip. Diamond sharpened blades with cutting grades 1-10 for fast clean clipping.

LIFE SUPPORT

Your knees may now be graze-free, but Elastoplast Sport is still here to adhere to your man-sized injuries

If you took a tumble in the garden when you were ten, mum would grudgingly put down her glass of cooking sherry and stroll over with the trusty box of Elastoplast. Sadly, you're all grown up now – and when some neanderthal kicks your legs away during Sunday five-a-side all the sympathy you'll get is a playful flick of the towel from team-mates in the changing room afterwards. But don't fret: The range of bandages, strappings and supports from Elastoplast Sport is as good for you as your old girl ever was – and helps you get back in the action much quicker.

- Damage your muscles and Elastoplast Sport's wrist, ankle and knee Adjustable Supports will cosset the joint, supporting weak areas. Made from wetsuit-like Neoprene, they retain body heat which also helps relieve pain; from £12.99.
- Elasticated Supports gently compress joints to help protect knees, wrists and ankles from strains and sprains; from £7.49.
- Elastic Adhesive Bandages from £4.79 provide compression while allowing movement so are great for those involved in rigorous activity.
- Rigid Strapping Tape £7.49 should help prevent injury by limiting excessive joint movement and supports during activity.

More details at the website including advice from a man who knows all about bone-crunching tackles: Ex-England rugby captain Martin Johnson. In fact, the only thing Elastoplast Sport can't supply is your dear old mum to kiss it better. Guess your girlfriend will have to do...

THE BIG FILM

Come and have a go

Exposing the rotten underbelly of football's hoolies, in a surprisingly enjoyable flick

Blazin' Squad arrived home for tea

The Football Factory

Stars: Danny Dyer, Frank Harper, Neil Maskell, Roland Manookian

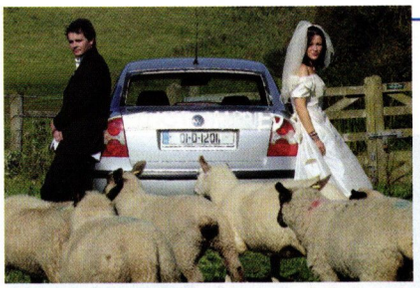
They say: From John King (author, not the banged-up paedo) comes this gory comic yarn centring on the Chelsea Head-Hunters, entering multiplexes just in time for Euro 2004. At the centre of the scrapping is Tommy Johnson (Dyer), a bored cockney whose life is being whittled away in a tide of cocaine, lager, casual sex and slapping the shite out of fellow footy fans. Cue the baldy bloke at the FA, drawing Chelsea against the infamous Millwall in the cup. Can Johnson's boys handle one almighty ruckus with the Burberry-clad, south-of-the-river scum?

We say: Pray that the twat next to you doesn't spill his popcorn, either because he's chortling about "Penge minge" or squirming from all the bloody face-stomping. If he does, chances are you won't be able to resist nutting the nonce, because never before has violence been so hilariously appealing. Watching these idiot hoolies from the safety of your comfortable cinema seat, the only thing that seems more charming than smashing a fellow geezer's boat in is strutting around in a large group of drunken mates. Most odd.

Best bit: A toss up between the director's vision of Liverpool (ten blokes in tracksuits standing next to a burnt out car/pile of tyres) or the human dartboard scene. LC

Jones got stuck into his community service



The Honeymooners

Stars: Jonathan Byrne, Alex Reid, Justine Mitchell

They say: A jilted groom and an angry waitress are stranded in the Irish countryside together. They argue, make up, argue, make up... well, you get the idea.
We say: An ultra-low-budget romantic comedy with more com than rom.
Best bit: When the trigger-happy neighbours object to the "city gobshites" – it's like the rednecks of Deliverance guest-starring in Ballykissangel. JR

The Calcium Kid

Stars: Orlando Bloom, Omid Djalili, Rafe Spall

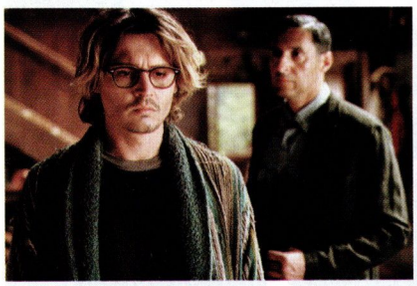
They say: Orlando Bloom swaps Middle Earth for Sarf London as Jimmy "The Calcium Kid" Connelly, a milkman turned pro boxer. Has he got the bottle to be a contender?
We say: This spoof doc delivers a few jokey jabs, but never punches above its weight.
Best bit: Jimmy's rapper mate Stan: "Float like a boat, sting like a bee, nut him on the chin and he'll go down in three." JR



Secret Window

Stars: Johnny Depp, John Turturro, Maria Bello

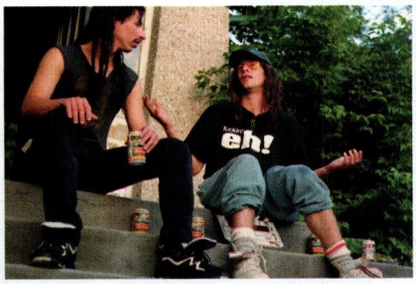
They say: A reclusive writer (Depp) is threatened by a psycho Southern hick (Turturro) who says he stole his short story. Can Johnny Boy prove his innocence before death comes a-calling?
We say: Another brain-mashing take on Stephen King's schlock, with Depp's perky, post-Pirates Of The Carribean presence the only reason to watch.
Best bit: The bloody end. AJ



Fubar

Stars: Paul Spence, David Lawrence

They say: Canadian drinking buddies and be-mulleted headbangers Terry and Dean are the subject of this spoof doc. A camera crew follows the idiot pair as they booze, brawl and are finally forced to face up to testicular cancer.
We say: Cheap and cheerful indie flick with frequent flashes of comedy brilliance: imagine Garth and Wayne in Spinal Tap...
Best bit: The fight scene, when some fool genuinely gets his teeth knocked out. DM

Our House

Stars: Ben Stiller, Drew Barrymore, Eileen Essel

They say: Nice, middle class Ben and Drew move into most of a big old house in Brooklyn. Once the old dear upstairs pegs it, it'll all be theirs! Except she's got no intention of conveniently dying...
We say: Plenty of belly laughs and puke gags mask the fact that we're in very familiar black comedy territory here.
Best bit: Essel, the old lady from hell, making her screen debut – aged 81! MB

Why can't we see it?

They're still twiddling with the special effects shots – well, there are 980

Van Helsing

Stars: Hugh Jackman, Kate Beckinsale

What we know: It's not just vampires – Van Helsing takes on werewolves and Frankenstein's monster...
What we fear: It won't live up to the brilliant trailer.
FHM*'s prediction: They've spent a fortune here. That's got to be good, hasn't it?

The FHM Multiplex

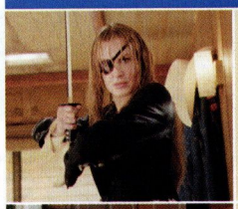
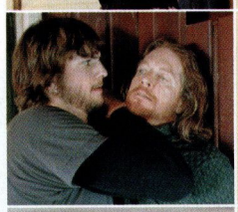
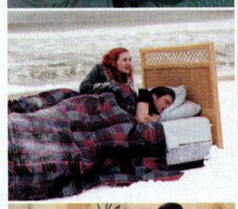
From the glorious to the grotty...



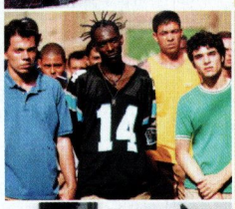
1 Kill Bill Volume 2
Stars: Uma Thurman, Michael Madsen, David Carradine
Fewer fights, more talking, lots more minutes – Volume 2 might not win over any new fans to Tarantino's blood-drenched epic, but if you liked the first... ★★★★☆



2 The Butterfly Effect
Stars: Ashton Kutcher, Amy Smart
Pretty-boy Kutcher removes his trucker cap long enough to continually go back in time to fix stuff, except – surprise – he only makes the present worse. Tends towards the overly complicated, but a fun ride. ★★★★☆



3 Eternal Sunshine Of The Spotless Mind
Stars: Jim Carrey, Kate Winslet
Clever brainwipe comedy. When Winslet literally erases ex-boyfriend Carrey from her memory, he gets his brain buzzed too. Original and surprising, with Carrey not too annoying at all. ★★★☆☆



4 Carandiru
Stars: Luiz Carlos Vasconcelos, Milhem Cortaz, Milton Gonçalves
Another fine slice of uncompromising Brazilian cinema. It's a disturbing look at a violent 1992 prison riot, murderously put down by Sao Paolo cops. Powerful stuff. ★★★☆☆

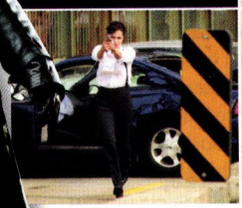
5 The Good Old Naughty Days
Stars: Long-dead bongo actors
Bizarre compilation of clips from vintage tug-movies – the sort of films where the men kept their hats on. Surprisingly hardcore; unsurprisingly unerotic. The kind of sweat your grandad would have soiled his flat cap over. ★★★☆☆

6 Wondrous Oblivion
Stars: Sam Smith, Delroy Lindo, Emily Woof
Off-kilter story about a boy obsessed with cricket. Bit shonky, but Lindo is on good form as ever as a West Indian patriarch. The big surprise though is it's British and not rubbish. ★★★☆☆

7 Hidalgo
Stars: Viggo Mortensen, Omar Sharif
Horsey drama set in the 1890s and what Viggo did after Lord Of The Rings. A cowboy enters his nag in a desert race. Pretty gee-gees, lots of landscape, cardboard characters. ★★☆☆☆

8 Anazapta
Stars: Lena Headey, David La Haye, Jason Flemyng
Not-very-thrilling supernatural Middle Ages thriller. A French prisoner stirs up mud and blood in a plague-ridden English shithole. Rent Holy Grail for an evening instead. ★★☆☆☆

9 Twisted
Stars: Ashley Judd, Samuel L Jackson, Andy Garcia
Dim, obvious thriller with Judd reprising her usual ruff-tuff action-girl role (although minus Morgan Freeman this time.) Sadly you can see the "twist" three miles from the cinema. ★★☆☆☆



10 Taking Lives
Stars: Angelina Jolie, Ethan Hawke, Kiefer Sutherland
Angie's latest pops briefly into cinemas, probably for a solitary week on its inevitable journey to Blockbuster. Serial killer takes the identities of his victims. Jolie's an FBI profiler. Snore. ★★☆☆☆

DVD OF THE MONTH

Fighting spirit

Little Tom grows his hair and acts tough. Makes for a cracking movie, though

The Last Samurai

Stars: Tom Cruise, Ken Watanabe, Timothy Spall
Expect to pay: £22.99
The film: ★★★★☆
The extras: ★★★☆☆
The film: Lovingly-designed 1870s-set epic, as Tom Cruise jacks in his job pimping for gunsmiths to train up Imperial Japan's first Westernised infantry. When his boys get improbably cut up by old-school samurai – appearing majestically on horseback through the mist – the sword-wielders spare our Tom, recognising a fellow warrior and take him back to Samuraiville. From then on it's Dances With Big Knives – but at least the mystical mumbo-jumbo and meaningful walks through cherry blossom are more than compensated for by some terrific non-CGI scrapping, plus plenty of eye-candy for the martial arts buff.
The extras: Sadly there's no option to excise the tacked-on Hollywood ending. Instead, disc two is packed with solid "making of" docs, a cool deleted-scene beheading, the Cruiser and lovey director Ed Zwick prattling on about how noble the samurai were, and historians pointing out that in reality they were a right bunch of bastards. Oops. MB

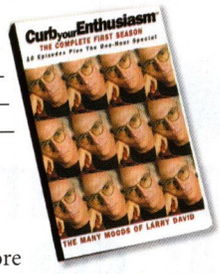
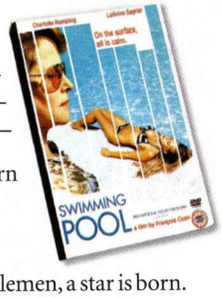
Expect to pay: £19.99
The film: ★★★★☆
The extras: ★★☆☆☆
The film: Shallow, tricksy but thrilling slash-'em-up. The script's a disappointment, but Tarantino makes up for it with blood-drenched, hyperkinetic direction. Instant classic.
The extras: If it's extras you want, wait for the inevitable Vols 1 and 2 box set – 'cause there's next to sod-all here. MB

Curb Your Enthusiasm



Expect to pay: £34.99
The show: ★★★★☆
The extras: ★★☆☆☆
The show: The first ten episodes of Seinfeld co-creator Larry David's suburban insanity – a script-free masterpiece of coincidence and cringing pettiness. Season Two's more confident, but we still laughed so hard wee dribbled out.
The extras: Dull interviews and the feeble hour-long pilot. CB

Swimming Pool



Expect to pay: £19.99
The film: ★★★☆☆
The extras: ☆☆☆☆☆
The film: Psychodrama, as Charlotte Rampling's French villa break takes a turn for the creepy when she's joined by the owner's screw-up daughter – Ludivine Sagnier – who alternates sunbathing topless with banging the gardener. Gentlemen, a star is born.
The extras: Er... there aren't any. MB

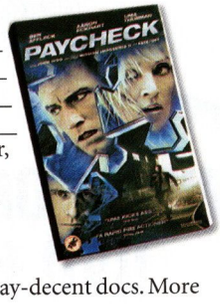
Paycheck



Expect to pay: £17.99
The film: ★★☆☆☆
The extras: ★★★☆☆
The film: Muddled near-future thriller, in which actionmeister John Woo's stunts and bangs can't compensate for Ben "wood" Affleck's charisma-free performance.
The extras: Commentaries and halfway-decent docs. More fun than the film. MB

Take aways

In your video store this month...

1 S.W.A.T.
Maverick cop Colin Farrell's maverick boss tells him to go up against maverick ex-cop former buddy. Good fun.

2 Out Of Time
Passable race-against-time thriller. A small-town police chief's murder investigation points to himself as the killer. ★★★☆☆

3 Starship Troopers 2
Enjoyably cheesy straight-to-video sequel with similar bugs and big guns, thankfully.

4 King Of The Ants
Deeply weird horror, based on a book by Fast Show's Charlie Higson, with Cheers' George Wendt. Yes, it's that strange.

5 Thirteen
An assortment of bolshy Californian teens smoke, do drugs, throw up and screw. So what else is new?

6 Stuck On You
Toothless Farrelly brothers comedy, as conjoined twins go to Hollywood. This desperately needs more sicko gags.

7 Dead End
Daft dad takes a short cut through the woods. Oops. Fresh and funny shocker with a nice line in decapitation.

FACE SAVERS

If sensitive skin is an issue, upgrade to Nivea For Men's two latest solutions...

Back in the Dark Ages, as your dad will tell you, men didn't bother looking after their skin. A swift wipe with an old dishcloth would remove a little grime, then it was off down the boozer for a night of dominoes, darts and Duran Duran. And they all had the skin-tone of rotten pears.

Thankfully, we all now take a little more care of our faces – even those of us with sensitive skin. Because if ordinary cleansers irritate your face, Nivea For Men's new Sensitive Facial Wash is the answer: soap, alcohol, colourant and fragrance-free, this face cleanser with vitamins and chamomile, removes stubborn, built-up dirt while protecting the natural moisture barrier of the skin, helping to prevent unwanted blemishes.

Meanwhile, to protect tricky skin from the horrors of pollution, air-con and light-induced skin ageing, check out Nivea's Sensitive Moisturiser. Again, they've chucked out alcohol, colourant and fragrance; instead Vitamin E, ProVitamin B5, natural herb extracts and chamomile can provide protection against sources of irritation throughout the day. Used with the other members of Nivea For Men's Sensitive range – shaving foam, gel and after shave balm – even the most uppity skin can be tamed!

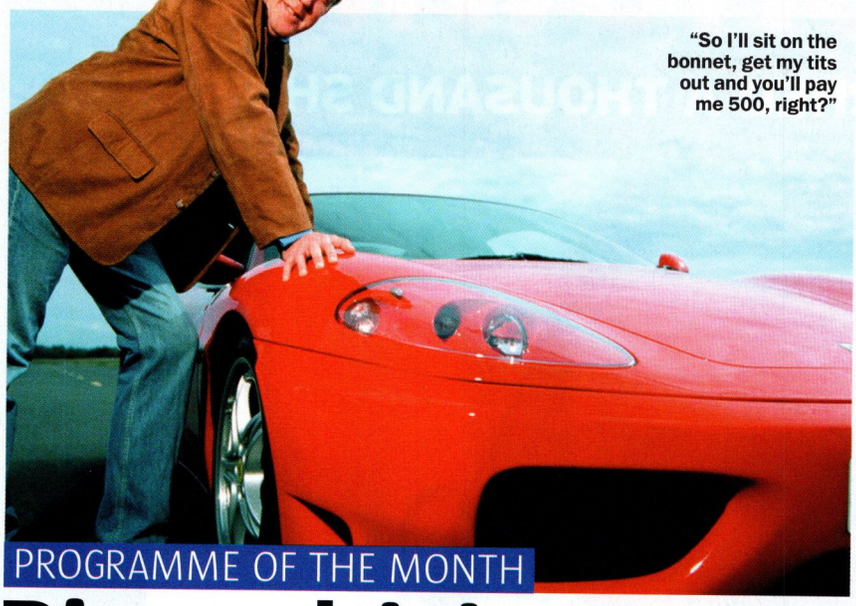
THE DAY AFTER TOMORROW IN CINEMAS MAY 28TH



"So I'll sit on the bonnet, get my tits out and you'll pay me 500, right?"

PROGRAMME OF THE MONTH

Binge driving!

Lock your woman away. Telly's premier motor show's back!

Top Gear

BBC2, May 9

What is it? The Top Gear chaps would make brilliant bank robbers. You've got James "Brains" May as the evil genius mastermind, Richard "Tiny" Hammond to wave the guns about and Jeremy "Hair-Like-A-Trappist-Monk" Clarkson as the getaway driver. See? Told you they'd be good. Sadly, the quirky trio don't rob banks, but they do host one of the finer aspects of BBC viewing: Top Gear. Yes, with their unique take on modern motoring – driving too fast, bickering like kids, attempting to jump ten caravans in a Volvo – the boys are back, doing much the same stuff as last year but, according to Hammond, "a bit better". Indeed, the chaps at the BBC are remaining as tight-lipped over the content of the show as they are over the identity of resident track driver "Stig" (FHM discovered the identity of the previous Stig. The BBC killed him off. You do the math). But we just know it's going to be good.

Reasons to watch: A car-mad celebrity every show, insane stunts and the brakes tested on the world's finest supercars. Come on! RB

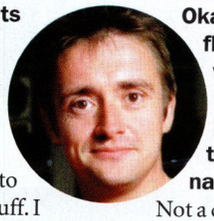
Q&A Richard Hammond

The tiny Top Gear chappie on stupendous stunts, humiliating Clarkson and the new Stig...



Okay – the stunts first. What madness can we expect in the new series?

Oh there's going to be lots of great stuff. I don't want to give anything away, but there's going to be some bloody fantastic ones...

Richard, if you don't give anything away this is going to be a very short interview...

Okay, we're going to play darts on a scale you've never seen before – and I may or may not get struck by lightning. Ha! There's some big stuff in there. We're turning things up a notch.

Clearly. So who's the new Stig?

I don't expect you to believe this, but I don't know.

Fair enough. Who's the new Stig?

I don't know! Neither Jeremy, nor James nor myself know, and we've kept it that way in case we get pissed and blab.

Okay. So what flash cars can we expect to see Jeremy booting tell me the Stig's name.

Not a chance! You've seen what happens when his name gets out, we kill him off. So it would be unfair to the new Stig. But don't get too fond of him. We keep him in a cupboard, drag him out, get him to do things, then put him away again. Fondness is not a sentiment reserved for Stig.

Finally then. If you have no interest in cars, why should you bother watching Top Gear?

Because it's three blokes sitting around talking, just as they would in a pub, about cars. Women watch because they're intrigued to find out what blokes are like, and they're probably appalled to discover that we're just as sad as they think we are. Plus we humiliate each other, which is always good. RB

The All Star Comedy Show

ITV1, April 29

What is it? Vic and Bob's new two-part sketch show combines current faves Coogan, Walliams and Lucas with old crinklies like Ronnie Corbett and Frank Carson. So crazy it could just work!

Reasons to watch: Big names, quick-fire sketches. What's not to like?

Shane

ITV1, late April

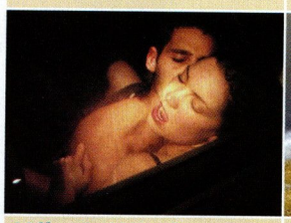
What is it? New family sitcom written by, and starring, Frank Skinner as a London cabbie who's bored of both his job and his marriage.

Reasons to watch: Very much a mainstream comedy but with some genuine laughs and the inevitable Skinner wanking gags.



I Like To Watch

Channel 4, early May

What is it? Enjoy watching people shagging? Then here's a whole documentary about people just like you!

Reasons to watch: They're all here; from the unfortunate woman who's been spied on for 17 years – to the man who sets up couples so he can watch them at it. Naughty.

Destination D-Day: The Raw Recruits

BBC1, early May

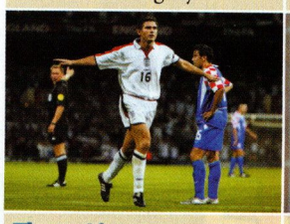
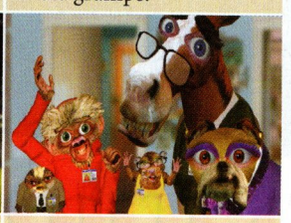
What is it? On the 60th anniversary of D-day, a load of young recruits are put through the original training young Brits endured after being called up for WW2.

Reasons to watch: To find out whether today's young bucks are as tough as old gramps.





Three Lions

Sky One, May

What is it? Three films following three Euro 2004 hopefuls; Ashley Cole, James Beattie and Frank Lampard, who comically told FHM about Makele's enormous cock. Top man!

Reasons to watch: To see how the other half live, while going ludicrously green at their extravagant lifestyles.

I Am Not An Animal

What is it? Truly surreal new animated black comedy about a group of animals rescued from a vivisection lab. Yep, The Vicar Of Dibley it isn't.

Reasons to watch: The FHM office was split on this one, but with voices from Steve Coogan, Simon Pegg and Julia Davis the big names are on board. DS

GAME OF THE MONTH

Taste the pain

This game's a wrong un, but in a good way...

The Suffering

PS2, Xbox, £39.99

The beef: Big fan of violence in games? Cool, The Suffering's the game for you, then. Here you play Torque, a bad-ass con (you can tell he's hard because he's got the really deep voice + mutton chops combo) on Death Row for the murder of his wife and two nippers. But just as the needle of justice is poised, everything goes tits up, when hell, quite literally opens under the prison. Bondage freaks with blades for limbs and heads hammered on with rail spikes, and junkie creatures with syringes for eyes stalk the cell blocks, slaughtering cons and guards willy-nilly. Unsurprisingly you break out and get lots of guns and ammo with which to stop 'em and it's all very nicely done – with a smooth transition between first and third-person viewpoints – although the plot jarrs and jumps and is often incomprehensible. Then there's the violence. This rates with Rockstar's recent Manhunt as one of the most gruesome and heavy-handedly violent games we've ever played – not necessarily when shooting hellspawn – it's just every level is littered with skinned, decapitated human detritus. It's a sick, sick, sick puppy.
Best bit: The first time our man Torque transforms...
Will you still be playing it in six months? There are difficulty levels to choose, but half a year? Probably not.
Verdict: Totally, gleefully, unashamedly fucked up. Great.

'It's the wire-away!'

Is your online gaming experience tarnished by unsightly wires? No more, buddy

Two very dull-looking boxes indeed, but the Neverwire 14 thingumies represented here in photographic form actually rock. Rather than stretch a broadband lead to your Xbox or PC through tripwires pulled tautly across your house, these bad boys use the magic of electrickery to send the signal straight through the mains. So plug your modem – through these – into the electrical socket, then out the other end and – through another box – into your Xbox and who-hoo! Broadband gaming!

At £175 for two, these ain't cheap, but they sure are good. Call 01582 502500, or go to www.neverwire.com to purchase them with money.

Words: Rory Buckeridge. All FHM's PC games are played on an Alienware Area 51, why? Because they're good (www.alienware.com)

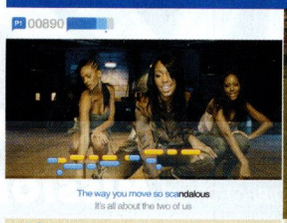
Keeping twitchy fingers satisfied this month



Singstar

PlayStation2, £39.99

The beef: Never, ever, ever to be played sober. But add seven pints of export lager, and Singstar will provide unlimited post-pub entertainment. It's a karaoke game which comes with two mics, so you can pick your song and have a sing-off against similarly leathered mates. Here's the science bit: it somehow knows if you're belting out Britney in tune, and scores you accordingly. It's witchcraft I tells ye!
Best bit: Busting a power-up move on the final line and taking the crown.
Will you still be playing it in six months? Oooh, yes.
Verdict: Game for piss heads. Our kind of thing.

FIFA Euro 2004

All formats, £39.99

The beef: After spunking fortunes on FIFA's lucrative football game franchise, EA Games' inevitable Euro 2004 cash-in plops on FHM's game-laden desk. And while it's not bad in any respect, there's little new here for anyone who found FIFA 2004 lurking in their Christmas stocking. If you're after a footy game, may we politely suggest Pro Evolution Soccer 3, it's simply better.
Best bit: Winning as England, of course.
Will you still be playing it in six months? What, when FIFA 2005 comes out? Not a chance.
Verdict: Another shameless cash in.

Hitman Contracts

All formats, £39.99

The beef: Third game in the killing franchise sees the barcode-tattooed baldie of few words taking out more morally dubious gimps for hard cash. But while the open level design means there are many ways to complete a hit (go in guns a-blazin', or sneak to the kill) this usually results in pointless meandering through levels, wondering what the flip you're supposed to do next. Hardcore gamers will love this, casual players will tire of it very quickly.
Best bit: Completing a hit.
Will you still be playing it in six months? Really, no.
Verdict: For patient gamers only.

Ninja Gaiden

Xbox, £39.99

The beef: Word is that this epic ninja slasher is awesome. But we're buggered if we know. After 18 minutes of superb, balletic swordplay we met a boss so fiendishly, ludicrously difficult to master, that we tried about 50 times, before grumpily frisbeeing the disc at the PR's head. A pointless waste of everyone's time, made worse by the fact that it does look so tantalisingly good.
Best bit: If you ever find out, drop us a line, eh.
Will you still be playing it in six months? For £40 there's literally 18 minutes of gameplay on offer here.
Verdict: Unplayable.

The Streets

A GRAND DON'T COME FOR FREE

(679 RECORDINGS)

The story: "Like the blade of a sword, I am forged in flames, fiery hot!" These gay opening lines of Kiss's orc slaying LP, Music From The Elder, are the kind of drug-addled nonsense we expect from a concept album. Hence, someone should have told li'l oike, Mike Skinner, that following the stormin' Original Pirate Material with a fluid tale of charva woe, just ain't cricket... innit. Nevertheless... behold the world's first concept album documenting a bunch of crap about The Bill, McDonald's' car park and being beaten to a pulp by your TV repairman. Of course, it's utter nonsense, but by God do we love it. From the rousing "I don't know the first thing about football!" chant of Not Addicted, right through to the end of the eight minute (!) finale Empty Cans.

Listen to when: According to the press release, "on a car journey, taking your dog to the vets". Our pooch isn't even sick! Weirdoes.

Verdict: This could never be as exciting as The Streets' debut, but Skinner's still bashed out a daring, honest, daft scorcher from his pikey Stockwell flat. LC

Keane

HOPES AND FEARS

(UNIVERSAL ISLAND)

The story: A debut full of warbling "sensitive" indie for girls. Except, like Coldplay, said songs are so damn good, grown men will also be blubbing along.

Listen to when: At a festival, lighter aloft, with the missus on your shoulders.

Verdict: Despite occasionally sounding like Erasure, this lot will soon be bagging glam movie stars and wittering on about Free Trade lentils at the top of the rock tree. MS

Graham Coxon

HAPPINESS IN MAGAZINES

(EMI)

The story: Quitting Blur to go solo, one-man-band Coxon is – as catchy radio-pounder Freakin' Out proved – putting out some of his best work yet. There's everything from shouty punk rock to love-lorn melodies here.

Listen to when: Freakin' out of course. Or crying into your beer after being dumped.

Verdict: Tracks like All Over Me reveal Coxon's new confidence. Damon who? DM

Slipknot

Q&A

Their label won't play us their new CD, so we grilled front man Corey Taylor to find out if they still rock...

Why can't we hear the new stuff, does it stink?
Ssshh, I'm trying to keep my voice down so my son can continue his nap.

Sorry. Er, the album...
It's awesome – the extremes of Slayer reflected with the electiveness of Radiohead. It'll either change the world or basically burn. [Nursery-rhyme music starts playing.] Shit, my kid's toy is going off!

Umm, what one thing would shock us the most about you?
I'm a family man. I like hanging out with my wife. [Mobile starts ringing] Fuck! Don't call me on this line! The ring might wake my son up! He's 18 months – it's the best feeling raising a child.

But you still get drunk and destroy stuff, right?
Five months ago, I decided not to drink anymore. I still hang out in bars, but I'll sip on soda – I actually have more fun.

Seriously? Soda?
I used to drink a bottle and a half of Jack Daniel's every night. My final drunken night, I went to the Viper Rooms and ended up trying to jump off my hotel room balcony. It was really, really, bad man.

What about groupies, has the missus banned them?
She knows they'll never go away. If something happens, we talk, and try to work it out. But I'm not consciously looking for groupies – it's the same shit over and over.

What's the wildest thing you've seen these groupies do?
One of the guys from our support band used this lobster on a groupie, then bored a hole in it, and fucked it himself. After that he fed the meat to a drunk backstage. That's not right, but it is cool.

> 'I decided not to drink any more. I still hang out in bars, but I sip soda – I have more fun'

Nice. Finally, who has the smelliest boiler suit post-gig?
Well, the Clown tends to play with his bodily fluids a lot. There was the night of "the great Texas poo fight". I don't need to explain.

Please do...
It got to the point where six of us were shitting in our hands and throwing it at each other. It went all over the audience. That was a funny night – you never know who's going to have the nastiest poop. LC

Slipknot's elusive new album is out on May 24.

HAVE IT! Music

Pixies

WAVE OF MUTILATION: BEST OF PIXIES
(4AD)

The story: They may have made fat boys the Manics look like Westlife but late Eighties rockers Pixies also kicked up a marvellously unholy racket. And now they're back – scaring festival goers with their unique brand of mentalist rock.
Listen to when: You feel like giving someone a good kicking.
Verdict: Too screechy in places but contains a handful of bona fide classics. DS

Asher D

(INDEPENDIENTE)

The story: Fresh outta chokey, So Solid's wordsmith gets his chums round and rocks "'da'" mic. But where the Solid's sound is fresh, in your face and aggressive, Asher's smooth, R'n'B approach sounds more chart pop fodder than N*E*R*D. Oops.
Listen to when: Concealing your "piece".
The verdict: Asher and chums' rhyming hits the spot. Strange then, that they've produced such an unassuming, safe pop album. RBK

The Charlatans

The story: Great baggy survivors deliver their 347th album and it's a real grower. Musically, little has changed, but when Tim Burgess hasn't been busy watching animal porn (see page 36) he's been knocking out gems like High Up Your Tree. Which rocks.
Listen to when: Watching animal porn. Presumably.
Verdict: Another fine effort from Burgess' mob. DS

Freestylers

RAW AS FUCK
(AGAINST THE GRAIN)

The story: FHM's potted history of the Freestylers. First album. 1998. Awesome. Second album. 2002. Shit. Third album. Bit of both really. At times a bit too edgy, but when it's right – and Push Up is very right – you just know you've got a summer anthem in your hands.
Listen to when: Stuck in the inevitable festival traffic jam.
Verdict: A fine return, album four should be a cracker. RB

Gomez

(HUT)

The story: Ugghh. Yet another utterly predictable album from those four-eyed, cardy-wearers, who were almost quite good once. Like Ocean Colour Scene's last effort, but even less significant.
Listen to when: Playing Dungeons & Dragons with geek chums.
Verdict: It's not that bad (except when the fat twat with the croaky voice starts crooning). So how's about bowing out on a high lads? LC

Morrissey

(SANCTUARY)

The story: After seven years comes Mozza's new offering. And it's what you'd expect. Song titles are priceless (eg I Have Forgiven Jesus, All The Lazy Dykes), and lyrics wonderful ("'She told me she loved me – which means she must be insane'")... but is it enough?
Listen to when: You're missing the loveable old Manc fool.
Verdict: Better than Southpaw Grammar; worse than Vauxhall And I. RL

Ash

MELTDOWN
(INFECTIOUS)

The story: Fourth album time and the former teenage tearaways are all grown up. Which means they can bugger off to LA, grow beards and ditch the usual cheery punk-pop in favour of full-on metal mayhem. Result!
Listen to when: Cruising down Sunset Strip on your Harley. Or dreaming of it.
Verdict: Genius rock anthems, pulled off without even having to squeeze into a dodgy Darkness catsuits. MS

Grand National

KICKING THE NATIONAL HABIT
(SUNDAY BEST)

The story: From the summer bounce of Boner to the dreamy Drink To Moving On this is a sublime debut.
Listen to when: Refreshing the parts other bands can't reach.
Verdict: Think New Order-esque melodies, vocals reminiscent of The Police and basslines fresh out of the Happy Mondays. And to think they were a Queen tribute band not so long ago... DM

BEST FOR COMIC FREAKS

Indestructible!

It's like a comic book but bigger, better and on super-duper paper

Mythology: The DC Comics Art Of Alex Ross

Chip Kidd

Weight: Big chunk of Kryptonite

TITAN BOOKS, £24.99

The blurb: Fourteen years of genre-redefining work from fan-favourite Alex Ross – the prodigiously talented Yank whose photo-realistic comic art has put two decades on Superman and given Batman a beer gut. Thankfully Wonder Woman still looks like a honey, though.

The verdict: There's precious little text here, but who cares? Stunning, full-colour images on luxurious, glossy art paper are what you want, alongside masses of roughs, sketches and rarely-seen publicity material. Add in some terrifyingly good early work from Ross, aged three – the man was quite clearly born to draw this stuff – a specially commissioned strip, and finally the secret of his hyper-real technique: it's all done with photos. What a cheat!

SERPENT'S TAIL, £7.99

The blurb: Transparently based on the Jamie Bulger case, we follow the mysterious "Boy A" as he's released from prison to a new life of drugs, girls and duplicitous lies.

Verdict: Grim reading to be sure, but you turn the final page with real sympathy for a child-killer – which is a frankly amazing achievement from young Mr Trigell.

The blurb: Ex Special Ops commando starts running contraband out of Cuba. But when his plane plonks into the sea, he's rescued by former cop Rick Brocca, and the truth is out – the pesky Cubans have his daughter! Time to kill everyone!

Verdict: Great stuff. The villains are proper evil, the FBI devious shits and we haven't even mentioned the CIA yet.

Try it if you like: A heavily armed Columbo. RB

Peak performance

Serious about sports? Well get serious about your kit. Powerade want in

Nobody – your mates, your mum, that cute blondie who keeps smiling at you when you bump into her at the bar of your local – likes a lard arse. Which is why, four or five times a week you pound those expensive sneakers into submission on the treadmill at the gym down the road. Good work, fella, but ask yourself this – is your training kit complete? You've got the iPod, the cool retro track pants, even a pointlessly pricey kit bag to cart your sweaty stuff around in – but you could be letting yourself down in one vital area: hydration. Even though your body's 65 per cent water, a water loss of just two per cent may affect performance, so you need to keep hydration levels at the max. One way to help ensure your body's topped up is to slip a bottle of Powerade into your sports bag. The Official Sports Drink of Euro 2004 and the Athens 2004 Olympic Games, this isotonic drink boasts a combination of fast-acting carbohydrates and electrolyte which helps prevent dehydration and can delay the onset of muscle fatigue during exercise. Indeed, big brains at Loughborough University School Of Sports And Exercise Sciences reckon that Powerade can help improve endurance, help sustain energy and help maintain co-ordination. It won't turn you into the Energizer bunny, but it should help you maintain your sporting performance, what more can you ask for?

Billy Boy

Pot loved a massage

Billy Boyd enjoys an ale and spills the beans on boozy Hobbits, elfs and dwarfs...

Tipple of choice?
Lager. Or a good malt whisky.

What do you like about this pub?
The smell! You can still smell the Great Fire of London in here. And pubs should be like this: wooden and small and old with different rooms. Rather than ex-banks where there's four thousand people in one room. Here they've got barrels up on shelves for no reason. Which is good.

You must have been to some pretty wild bars, living in LA...
I was at the party where Paris Hilton walked into a swimming pool. That was good – that's got to be fun. I actually missed the moment but there was the main swimming pool and a smaller pool, and she walked right into the small one. Brilliant! Beautiful! And Sean Connery and all that were there. God, if I'd done that – what a downer...

How did you celebrate bagging so many Oscars?
The celebrating after the Oscars was nothing like you'd expect. Everyone said to me, "You must have gone to some amazing parties," but by the time I'd done an hour of press and gone to the fans' party the rest of them had finished. I went back to the hotel with some old mates and ordered a couple of bottles of champagne on the work tab.

Crazy! Ever filmed scenes drunk or hungover?
There was one day on Master And Commander where we had a huge night out. I mean huge – all the main cast came out and we went and got rat-arsed. I was watching the clock as I knew we were sailing on the boat at seven the next morning. So I headed back at 2 or 3am and I get up at six feeling bad then got to the ship and no-one else is around. They'd cancelled the day's filming about half an hour after I left! I was there on the boat having to climb the rigging, getting seasick and thinking, "If I'd only stayed out later." That was a lesson learnt – never go home early.

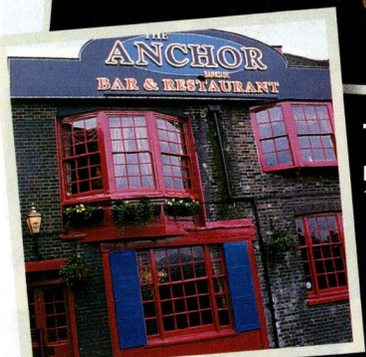
Did you ever get to drink in costume?
Yes, on Fridays. On Lord Of The Rings we'd go to Viggo and Orlando's trailer which was called The Cuntybago. Viggo was good for getting Irish whiskey, which was great but I keep trying to educate him on malt whisky.

Hobbits and an elf enjoying malt whisky?
Hobbits, an elf, a King of Men, maybe a dwarf. And quite a few times a wizard, sometimes a princess. Ha ha! That's enough to make anyone feel pissed. We had some good times on that one, some great times.

Any comedy tales?
There's an outtake that no-one knows about of Viggo Mortensen in the final battle when he's fighting the cave troll at the end of Return Of The King. The cave troll swings at him, he kind of backs away and pulls out an AK and goes, "Bangbangbang!" It was one of Peter Jackson's machine guns – he likes all that.

Nice. Finally, who would be your ultimate barmaid?
Charisma Carpenter, who plays Cordelia Chase in Buffy and Angel. Because of her immense knowledge of alcoholic drinks, of course. I reckon she'd be the greatest barmaid in the world!

Master And Commander: The Far Side Of The World is out to rent and buy on DVD and video.



The Anchor, Bankside, London

Décor: Sat right on the Thames and chock full of dusty drinking tankards and historical pictures. Cosy roaring fireplace and plenty of brass fixtures.

Billy says: "I used to work in a printer's in Glasgow and the bar next door was just like this, so it's kind of my favourite bar. If we were working late at night the barman would come round with a tray of beers so you'd have a beer in the factory. That was cool."

The mere mention of cheese sent Barry into a spin

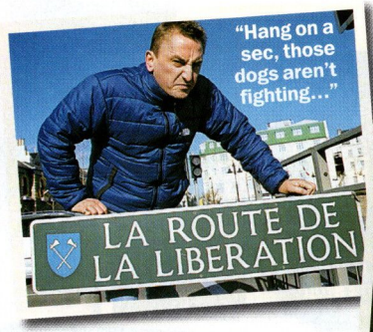
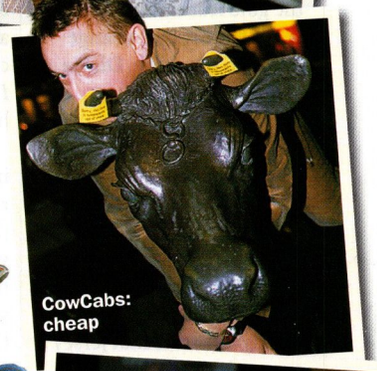
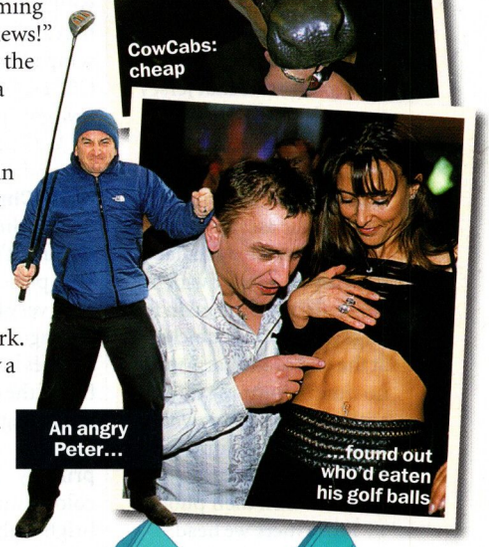
JERSEY

Venturing from the mainland, our boisterous barfly Piers visits some extremely posh boozers – and becomes famous in the process!







"PARTY TONIGHT – YOU about?" said the text from my good mate Phil.

"Can't, I'm in Jersey!" came my swift reply.

"Doesn't matter – no dress code." And there in a nutshell you have it. Most people think of Jersey as an unfashionable item of woollen clothing rather than a British island nine miles long and five wide, 14 miles off the coast of Northern France. Bergerac aficionados amongst you will be well aware that it is populated by murderers, psychopaths and rich tax exiles with yachts.

After an hour's flight from Gatwick, snapper Dicky and I arrive at the plush Pomme D'or Hotel opposite the harbour in the capital of St Helier. By the lifts, a framed black and white photo shows the hotel with a bloody great swastika flag flying outside. I had expected the people of Jersey to be right of centre politically speaking, but I hadn't expected such refreshing honesty! Closer inspection however, reveals that the photo was taken back in 1943 when the Nazis, having invaded the island, proceeded to commandeer the hotel as their HQ. Dickie and I resolve that our invasion will commandeer nothing but booze and the hearts of a few ladies.

There's just time for a quick goose-step around the agreeably civilised town centre before grabbing a taxi to Les Mielles golf course for a quick nine holes. Outrageous fortune, a howling wind and a large pond conspire against me however and Dickie emerges smugly victorious.

Meet the Press

The evening starts off with a vast platter of seafood at an excellent eaterie called The Salty Dog where we are joined by a couple of hacks from The Jersey Post – apparently FHM's invasion is big news on this little island! From there, our first port of call is a pink wine bar called Lido's – an apt name, for it is literally swimming with thirtysomething women sporting impressive buoyancy aids. Forget footballers' wives, Jersey wives are the wealthiest, brassiest, most tanned and minted of the lot. Suffering severe eyestrain, Dickie and I seek restorative vodka and tonics nearby in the more mundane surroundings of Café De Paris. As I'm ordering, a bloke pokes me in the chest: "'Ere, you're that FHM bloke – I heard you were coming over on the radio news!" Our visit has made the news? Make mine a double!

This is swiftly followed by a pint in Fridays, a pleasant orange place with sofas and modern art filled with people unwinding after the week's work. Which is chased by a tequila slammer in Chambers, a long, old, oak beamed bar complete with a School Disco band blaring out Eighties classics. Embarrassment forces Dickie to escort me outside when my attempt at breakdancing leaves me spinning on my back in a pool of lager. I manage to regain my composure in the Golden Bhudda Bar. Like every bar so far in Jersey it's packed, but, confused by the gold leaf ceiling, central water feature and strange bamboo furniture, Dickie agitates for change.

Bar hopping

He gets it nearby where we discover another of what is proving to be something of a Jersey phenomenon – the Ultra Modern Establishment or UME™. These places clearly illustrate that Jersey's money isn't all ploughed into some of the palatial homes of its residents. The B Bar is a low ceilinged, psychedelic assault on the senses complete with flat screen TVs, four of which are conveniently situated in four large double bed cubicles at the end of the bar. I waste no time in jumping into bed with two local lasses who waste no time in jumping straight out as soon as Dickie's taken their photo.

From there we head out on elastic to the newly built WaterFront Centre overlooking the Marina and The Bar, a large, glass fronted, two storey room with an amazing view of the bay.

As closing time is called we rebound back to sample some late-closing karaoke at The Royal Yacht Hotel. How women who can't hit a note have the audacity to take on the vocal complexities of I Will Always Love You remains one of life's great mysteries.

We then poke our heads into nearby Pure, Jersey's rave club, but find it sparsely populated by scowling youths in Burberry baseball hats and scary girls with scraped back hair and no GCSEs. "Where did all the love go?" ponders Dickie.

We find it safe and sound in another of Jersey's UME's – The Chicago Rock Café back at the Waterfront Centre. It's a strange name for a place that seems to have very little to do with Chicago, rock music or cafés but it's bar of the night so far. High ceilings, primary colours and bright lights pulse and throb with the music, giving me the impression that I'm starring in a futuristic cartoon – though that could of course be the tequila.

PUB BORE

In Devon, Connecticut, it is illegal to walk backwards after sunset.

Getting blurry

It's a short stagger round the corner to Liquid, Jersey's biggest nightclub where we are met by manager Roland Topf. "Jersey's become a great party island in recent years," he explains, "a lot of money's been invested in bars and clubs because we've needed to attract a younger crowd to come over." The main dance floor is large, white and oval with minimalistic lighting and its filled with some of the tastiest Jersey cows on the island. In the DJ box we briefly join the boys from Damage (now Cherry Black Stone, if you please) who are getting the crowd going. Jade unwisely hands me the microphone and I splutter a pathetic, "Hello Jersey!" before it is sensibly snatched back.

Things get a little blurry from here, but soon after closing time I discover myself squeezed into a taxi with Roland and some women as we head to "a friend's house". It turns out to be a house so staggeringly big I'm speechless – the kitchen is twice as big as my flat and has the biggest indoor pool on the island. Minted Michael, as I bravely christen the owner, good-naturedly dishes out drinks from behind his bar and it's well past six by the time I get back to Nazi headquarters.

It's been a top night out in Jersey and as the taxi driver drops me off in the freezing cold, I reflect that a jersey might have indeed been a good idea. FHM

TNT FM 032

extreme speed
It's rush hour, you're against the clock and in a hurry. A great driving game which will have you on the edge of your seat!

TNT FM 102

soccer
Football fan? Buy this game... pass, shoot and score goals that Beckham would dream of... well maybe Tony Adams!

helicopter
Your mission is...to destroy. Feel like an 'Airwolf' in this great shoot 'em up.

TNT FM 104

space incident
Can you survive a deadly flight through space? Blast as many ships as possible, collect and upgrade weapons as you progress through the stars...

race
The ultimate F1 driving experience. Be Schumacher on your mobile - this game is destined to become a Java classic. Girlfriend advisory - Highly addictive!

TNT FM 137

road ruler
Hey road ruler, choose your car and hit the streets in this exciting sequel to cruise control. Race against an opponent in 2-way traffic and win the race.
Stay on the wrong side of the road and be chased by cops!

TNT FM 110

samukiko
Guide and battle Samukiko through 32 rooms to recover his lost sword. Face karateki, ninja, sumo wrestlers and the dragon across 8 levels of difficulty. Banzai!

TNT FM 037

basket mania
A classic basketball game with brilliant graphics. There are 12 levels and a load of environments – indoor, stadium, street, beach... A slam dunk of a game!

TNT FM 035

motomania
Motor racing maniacs are at work. Race at blinding speed on your favorite track. Play in tournament, race or knockout mode. Beat your opponents, be fast - don't lose control of your super acceleration.

TNT FM 020

b-man
A must have for old school gaming fans. Find your way through mazes and caves, placing bombs along the way to take care of those pesky monsters.
A multi-level classic!

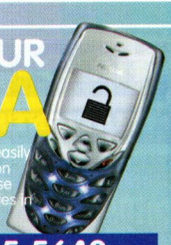
UNLOCK YOUR NOKIA



This new service allows you to easily unlock your mobile so it works on other networks. You can even use the SIM cards from other countries in your unlocked mobile.

CALL: 0906 635 5640

COMPATIBILITY NOKIA 3300 / 3510(i) / 3650 / 5100 / 6100 / 6220 / 6310(i) / 6500 / 6510 / 6610 / 6650 / 6800 / 7210 / 7250(i) / 7650 / 8310 / 8910(i)

Make sure you have the following information ready:

1. Your mobile number
2. The 15 digit IMEI (serial) number found under the battery pack or type *#06# into your phone.
3. Call the hotline and follow the instructions - the unlocking code will be read out at the end
4. Enter the unlock code into your mobile as if making a call - as you type the last digit the phone should say 'Restriction Off'.

Calls cost £1.50 per minute from a BT landline and last an average of 4 minutes. Please ask permission from whoever pays the bill before calling. 16 + only.

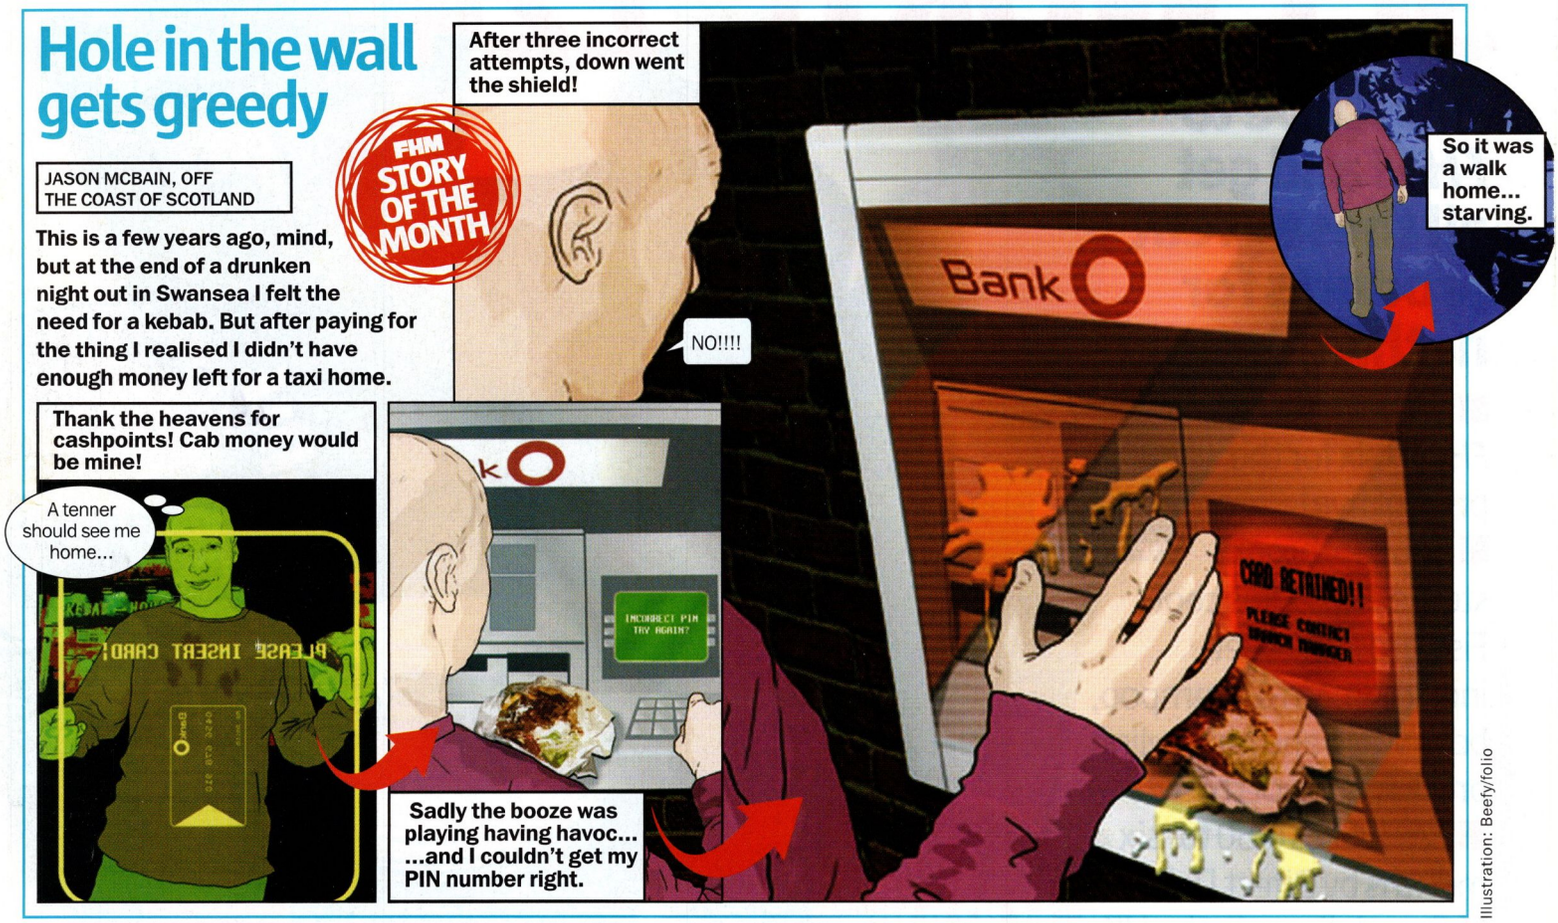
FHM STORY OF THE MONTH

This is a few years ago, mind, but at the end of a drunken night out in Swansea I felt the need for a kebab. But after paying for the thing I realised I didn't have enough money left for a taxi home.



Thank the heavens for cashpoints! Cab money would be mine!
A tenner should see me home...
PLEASE INSERT CARD
After three incorrect attempts, down went the shield!
NO!!!!
INCORRECT PIN TRY AGAIN?
Sadly the booze was playing having havoc...
...and I couldn't get my PIN number right.

Lezza's honour remains intact

A few years ago I was working in London. Ambling through Leicester Square one evening, I became aware that a lesbian couple walking hand-in-hand some yards ahead were receiving a ferocious amount of abuse from a gaggle of beered-up Sunderland fans. I couldn't fathom how the couple had possibly provoked this verbal bombardment – from my vantage point behind them, the only reason I could detect the jeers and catcalls was the leggy babe's partner looked to be at least three decades older and had combined a garish snakeskin trouser suit with a streaked blonde quasi-mullet. Eager to demonstrate my sensitive, enlightened side to the lass I was seeing at the time, I commented: "That's awful – have you heard the stick those tossers are giving that lesbian couple, just 'cos one's a bit older than the other?" I must have spoken a little too loudly however, as I was mortified when the aged "lesbian" wheeled around to fix me with a withering stare. It was Peter Stringfellow.

JIM OLDFIELD, MOSBOROUGH

Midnight pisser

Last Christmas I stayed with a friend and his family in their massive country house. Despite the presence of dozens of grandparents and cousins my mate and I still managed to get pole-axed, crawling into bed in the early hours. Some time later I woke desperate to relieve my bladder, but on stumbling out of my bedroom I was surrounded by closed doors. Unwilling to walk in on someone, I decided to brave the frosty air and relieve myself off the bedroom balcony. Imagine my bewilderment when I came down to breakfast next morning to find a pair of paramedics carting my mate's grandfather out on a stretcher. Apparently the old codger had stepped out for his morning constitutional and slipped on a patch of ice, screwing his back. Of course, my bedroom was directly above the accident blackspot: my golden shower had frozen and sent the old bird off to two weeks in hospital. A plumber duly arrived and spent three hours searching for the "leak". I admitted nothing, but did put a little salt on my icy discharge.

Sauna treasure

In order to support myself while at university, I used to work as an instructor at a private health gym. One morning while inspecting the saunas before we opened, I made an interesting find: a ten-inch gold vibrator! Carefully sheathing my hand in a carrier bag I took hold of the buzzing beauty, before placing it in the lost property box. Later that day my manager asked me to bring the item to his office for closer inspection. He plunged his hand straight into the bag, took out the tool and waved it in front of the by-now packed office, as the discovery had been the sole object of conversation among the staff all day. A jolly chap, he pointed it at each of the female employees in turn, saying, "Which of you girls left this, then?" before putting the vibe up to his nose and sniffing from one end to the other. "I recognise that smell – is it you, Julie?" he continued. You can imagine the look on his face when, in a stage whisper, I had to inform him that I'd actually found the thing in the men's sauna.
